Police Fire On Panama Crowd Led By Chanis

Near Revolt Halted As Ousted President Tears Up Resignation; Boy Killed, 9 Shot

Panama, Panama, Nov. 22 (AP).—Dr. Daniel Chanis, ousted president of Panama, led thousands of demonstrators tonight in a march on the residence of his successor. The national police broke up the near revolt with gunfire that killed a 3-year-old boy and wounded nine others, including two members of parliament.

Chanis' dramatic and unlooked-for appearance before the National Assembly set off the demonstration. He tore up a letter of resignation he signed three days ago and announced:

"I withdraw my resignation."

Bullets Fly in Street

They were joined by others who marched toward the official residence of Roberto Chiari, the man who succeeded Chanis in a lightning coup on Sunday.

Mounted and federal police charged down the thoroughfare in an attempt to break up any march on the presidential residence.

The crowd grew in number. Estimates of those who pushed toward the president's residence ranged from 10,000 to 30,000.

Machinegun and rifle fire crackled. Eyewitnesses said the fire was directed at the demonstrators.

Some took refuge behind palm trees as the bullets whizzed past. Cars in the street were riddled.

Chanis was at the head of the procession as it marched, eyewitnesses said. There was no immediate word on what happened to him, but it was known he was in the crowd when the firing began.

Boy, 6, Fatally Wounded

A 6-year-old boy was taken to the hospital, other persons who witnessed the shooting said. He was dead on arrival. The wounded member of Parliament was identified as Alejandro Gonzalez Revilla. He was shot in the leg. Four other persons suffered bullet wounds before the police succeeded in dispersing the demonstrators.

Police said one of their number was injured gravely. A cordon of police had been thrown around the President's residence, and Chiari was inside during the shooting. An official in the residence said Chiari had taken no steps toward resigning as a result of the outbreak.

Chiari was sworn in as President of Panama Sunday after the 58-year-old Chanis, a physician, was ousted in a clash of authority with the police chief, Col. Jose

4 Million Call Strike in France For Pay Hike

Paris, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The French government moved tonight to lessen the effect of a 24-hour general strike set for Friday by four million workers which threatens to paralyze all transportation and utility services and industrial and commercial activities.

The cabinet sent out instructions to officials calling for disciplinary action against any government employe interfering with the right to work.

Government employes and nationalized industry workers who join the strike will not be paid.

The strike was called as a warning to Premier George Bidault's government that labor was determined to force a general wage increase.

Hickenlooper AEC Attack Boomerangs

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) apparently has stirred up a hornets' nest by renewing his attack on the Atomic Energy Commission while stumping Iowa for reelection next year.

As the result of quick-trigger remarks about the AEC, Hickenlooper has brought down upon him a blistering attack by a long-time friend and supporter, William W. Waymack, famous Iowa editor and member of the AEC from 1946-48.

Among other things, Waymack accused Hickenlooper of "cheap and reckless smearing" and added: "I do not personally think that even political necessity extenuates it."

He accused the senior Iowa Senator of a questionable attitude toward the announcement that Russia has cracked the secret of atom-

American, 2 Other Phone Aides Accused Of Spying, Sabotage

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 22 (AP). Hungary announced today the arrest of three communications company executives, including Robert Vogeler of New York, on charges of espionage and sabotage. The communique declared all had confessed.

Vogeler, 38, is an assistant vice president of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. of New York and its roving representative in eastern Europe, with headquarters in Vienna.

Detained with him were Edgar Sanders, a Briton who is the local representative of I. T. & T., and Imre Geiger, a Hungarian national who is managing director of an I. T. & T. subsidiary, the Standard Electric Co., Ltd.

American and British diplomatic authorities asked the Foreign Ministry for permission to visit the

Colombia Liberals Call 3-Day Strike Against Elections

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Liberal Party tonight called for a sitdown strike against the "dictatorship and farce" of next Sunday's presidential election.

It asked its members to go on a "folded arms" strike from Friday until midnight Sunday.

Effectiveness will depend on how well the Liberals can make their plea known in the face of domestic censorship and what action the government may take to oppose the strike call.

Under the state of siege—modified martial law—the military controls the country. It seems unlikely the government will tolerate a general strike.

Ward Verdict Is Due Soon, U. S. Learns

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

A Communist court in Mukden has finished a long "investigation" of the Angus Ward case and should reach a verdict "in a matter of days."

This was the news that reached the State Department yesterday on the basis of newspaper and radio reports in Communist China. Although the reports gave few details, they were at least more definite than any news about Ward since his arrest on October 24.

The charges against Ward, which the State Department branded as "trumped up," were that he had beaten two Chinese employes of his consulate who were demanding back pay.

The reports that came yesterday were forwarded by American consular officials in Shanghai. One of them quoted the following that had appeared November 22 in the newspaper, Hsin Min Pao, at Communist-held Nanking:

"The American imperialist Ward and four criminals who brutally beat the Chinese workmen Chi Yu-heng and Chi Yu-feng had been questioned many times since they were turned over to the Mukden People's Court."

This newspaper account, attributed to a Mukden broadcast, went on to say that Ward and four consular employes arrested with him had been brought face to face with their accusers, and that both sides had made statements.

"The investigation of Ward has been completed," the Nanking story continued, "and within a short time the final questioning will take place and the verdict will be announced."

Another version of the same Mukden broadcast, printed in the Shanghai newspaper Sin Wen Jih Pao, described Ward and his fellow-defendants as "culprits," and called them an "American imperialist element who assaulted and insulted" the two Chinese. It said "the court gave many hearings to this case according to law."

It is taken for granted here that the verdict will be "guilty," since it always is in such conspicuous Communist trials. But the hope—and it is only a hope—is that the Communists will then order Ward and his staff members expelled.

Meanwhile, the State Department awaited response to Secretary Acheson's appeal to 30 foreign ministers to protest Ward's imprisonment.

The first few replies were "favorable," officials said last night, but they declined to identify the countries from which the answers came.

In London an official spokesman said the Foreign Office felt "concern" over Ward's arrest and was considering whether to protest. In Paris a Foreign Office spokesman reported the French government was "very favorable" to Acheson's appeal.

Troops Battle 1200 Hukbalahaps In Philippines

Manila (Wednesday), Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Twelve Philippines constabulary troops have been killed in a pitched battle with 600 Communist-led Hukbalahap rebels in Batangas Province, south of Manila, dispatches said today.

The rebels, equipped with trench mortars and machine guns, heavily outnumbered the government forces, but dispatches said reinforcements for the constabulary were on the way.

Constabulary reports said there had been 74 casualties on both sides in early fighting yesterday at Obando, north of Manila, where another 600 rebels were encountered.

Army Contract Declared Won On 'Rigged' Bid

By the United Press

Philadelphia Manufacturer Orville Morrison yesterday accused the Army Quartermaster Corps of rigging specifications in order to throw a $100,000 water cooler contract to the Westinghouse Electric Co.

Morrison, president of the Sunroc Refrigeration Co., made the charge at a hearing of the House Judiciary Subcommittee investigating monopoly trends.

The Army immediately announced it has asked permission to tell the committee its side of the story. Officials said the Army judge advocate's office had informed Morrison last Thursday that the Westinghouse award was properly made.

They said 10 "responsible manufacturers" had found no fault with the allegedly tailor-made specifications and had entered bids for the cooler contract.

Chairman Emmanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) called on the Justice Department to investigate, and demanded an explanation from Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, Army Quartermaster General.

Celler said he plans to send official transcripts of Morrison's testimony to the Federal Trade Commission and to the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department "for such action as they may see fit to take."

Morrison testified that he submitted a lower bid than Westinghouse on a supply of electric water coolers recently ordered by the Chicago office of the Quartermaster Corps. But, he asserted, the specification for the coolers were rigged by "wording Westinghouse sales literature into the Federal specifications."

Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.) broke in to say that "if it can be shown that bids were prepared behind closed doors in conjunction with Westinghouse, that is dishonest dealing."

Morrison said his firm supplied the Navy with refrigerating systems during the war "without one cent of profit" and that it could sell such equipment to Government agencies now for $40 to $60 less than they are actually paying.

"But we are not getting any Government business, and I don't think there's any intention of giving us any," he said.

Taft Studies U. S. Pension For All at 65

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft yesterday called for a Senate Finance Committee study of the feasibility of a basic, uniform Federal pension for all at age 65.

He warned that it might prove the "most expensive" social welfare project yet, doubted whether our economy could stand it, but asked the question:

"If a steel worker and a miner are to receive that sum ($100 monthly), why not a molder or a waiter?"

In a column prepared for distribution to Ohio newspapers, the GOP leader, now winding up a 100-day "preliminary" campaign for reelection, critically discussed the steel industry's pension settlement and its cumulative impact on the Government's own social security structure.

He said it raises the question of "whether we are drifting into a general problem of providing $100 a month for persons over 65 years of age to be paid either from Government or industry."

The Federal old-age insurance plan grades pension payments in accordance with wages previously paid, "but the matter now is becoming one of a flat sum for all, along the lines of the Townsend plan," Taft said.

He proposed the Senate Finance Committee, which already has ordered hearings in January on the Administration's House-passed expansion of social security benefits and coverage, give the new flat sum pension shift "the most careful study."

Taft, himself the second ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee, has been blasting the "welfare state" as the "farewell state" from one end of Ohio to the other, but his discussion of the pension issue was politically dispassionate.

Noting the trend started by the Ford Motor Co. and UAW toward supplemental payments, on top of Social Security old-age benefits, to a lump sum pension, he said the whole pension picture today is in "complete confusion."

Said Taft:

"I suggest that we should study

Aid Pledge Given FAO By Truman

President Truman told the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) yesterday that the United States will "work wholeheartedly" with other nations in attempting to solve the world food situation.

"I know that, at this session, the FAO will be considering ways and means of moving temporary surpluses of certain commodities from countries where they are not needed to countries where they are badly needed," he declared.

"The United States welcomes the initiative of this organization in seeking a solution to this problem. We pledge ourselves to work wholeheartedly with the other members in attempting to devise practical and effective methods for solving it."

Cites World-Wide Benefits

To an enthusiastic international audience that crowded the Shoreham Hotel conference room where the 58-nation delegates of FAO are meeting, President Truman also:

1. Spoke of the world-wide benefits that might accrue from operation of the famous "bold new program" of his inaugural speech, otherwise known as Point Four.

2. Urged that FAO "establish your permanent headquarters in the United States."

3. Expressed satisfaction that Lord Boyd Orr, former head of FAO, had been awarded this year's Nobel Peace prize.

4. Referred to the steps that have been taken by the nations of the world toward expanding world trade, such as the European Recovery Program and the International Wheat Agreement.

5. Expressed the hope that the International Trade Organization will "soon be established to help expand world trade by carrying on a continuous and systematic attack on trade barriers."

"If by working together in this organization," Mr. Truman declared, "we can create an abundance of food for all countries, we shall bring better health, longer lives and greater happiness to mankind everywhere."

Forward-Looking Program

He then declared that "if we are to achieve peace we must have a positive, forward-looking program to satisfy the physical needs and spiritual aspirations of mankind.

"Your organization," he emphasized, "is primarily concerned with meeting the needs of hundreds of millions of people for more and better food.

"To achieve this, your work centers around two major problems. The first is to increase the production of foodstuffs and other agricultural commodities. The second is to see that those commodities reach the peoples and countries which need them."

The President was accompanied by Secretary of Agriculture

Motion for Acquittal Of 14 Defendants Rejected by Judge

By Benjamin Bradlee

Both sides rested in the Snags Lewis gambling trial yesterday, the Government after 11 days and 31 witnesses, the defense after 10 minutes and one witness.

The case, in which Lewis and 13 others are charged with operating a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate, is scheduled to go to the jury today, after summations by both sides and instructions from Judge Matthew F. McGuire.

The Government rested yesterday morning after cross-examination of James Theodore "Single Action" Trice, a self-styled numbers player. He identified as his own four of the hundreds of numbers slips seized March 25 during the raid on Lewis' headquarters at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md.

Bridges' Attorney Sentenced to Jail But Judge Relents

San Francisco, Nov. 22 (AP).—Vincent Hallinan, chief attorney for Harry Bridges, was sentenced today to six months in jail for criminal contempt of court, after a bitter exchange of words with Federal Judge George B. Harris.

Judge Harris at first ordered Hallinan into custody immediately. Later he granted a stay to allow Hallinan to continue to represent the accused Communist union leader in his perjury trial.

The trial will be resumed at 10 a. m. Thursday. Under his original order, Judge Harris had continued the case until December 6 and told Bridges to get another lawyer.

The word battle brought a scathing denunciation of Hallinan's contemptuous attitude by the judge and a motion by the attorney that the judge disqualify himself.

Harris granted the stay after asking Bridges his opinion about changing to other counsel.

"I don't think I will get a square deal," Bridges said.

Straight 15-Cent Ride, Elimination Of Weekly Pass Among 3 Proposals

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Fare increases to keep pace with rising costs are necessary even without a wage increase, a top Capital Transit Co. official yesterday told an arbitration board.

He said the company will need $1,033,000 next year to keep up present service under existing wage rates.

J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller, declared that although no application has been made to the District Public Utilities Commission for a fare rise, either a rate boost or a sharp cut in service must be made in the next 12 months.

Testifying as the final witness in the arbitration hearing at the Hamilton Hotel, Heberle blamed a continuing 7½ percent decline in passenger traffic for the drop in income.

Gross Income of $552,000

Heberle said a change to a 15-cent cash fare, sale of tokens at two for 25 cents and elimination of the weekly pass would provide a gross increase of $552,000 a year, or $325,000 after taxes.

A jump to 15 cents cash, four tokens for 50 cents, and no weekly pass would bring in $1,322,000 gross and $778,000 net.

A third proposal to continue the 13-cent cash rate, drop token sales and raise the weekly pass to $1.85 would result in $958,000 gross and $564,000 after taxes, Heberle said.

The company official said the firm would need added gross passenger revenues of $1,753,000—which would leave $1,033,000 after taxes—or be forced to cut services. He warned that decreased service would mean decreased employment for company workers.

Net Income of $51,000

Heberle told the five-man arbitration board in a late session last night that without any increase in wage costs for the year ending November 1, 1950, the firm would have a net income of $51,000.

However, each year the company requires $2,930,000 for capital requirements covering new vehicles, track replacements and other facilities and only $2,326,000 is allotted in the balance sheet for depreciation. This leaves $604,000, which must come from net income, Heberle said.

Another $480,000 to provide a $2 dividend on company stock is also necessary, Heberle asserted, making a total of $1,084,000 minimum net income required. Deducting the estimated $51,000 expected, this leaves a deficiency of $1,033,000, Heberle declared.

Heberle said he was "offering no solution," but cited possible

'Good Party' for Aggressor

Economic Health Chief Need In Defense, Montgomery Says

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The top military figure of the five Brussels Pact nations, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, yesterday asserted that the chief requirement for the defense of western Europe is economic health.

Without it, he told a National Press Club luncheon audience, no amount of mere military strength will avail.

In strength lies peace, he declared, but the key to it is "economic strength and internal harmony." And, he added, in these respects he did not think "we stand very well."

Montgomery, here on an unofficial 12-day visit in which he will make four more set speeches, was asked if he believed western Europe could resist aggression from the East, and if not, how long would it be before its defense position would be adequate.

If anyone commits an act of aggression, from any quarter, Montgomery replied, "we'll have a real good party and kill a lot of people."

Asked about the effect of the atomic bomb, Montgomery said he agreed it was a "nasty" thing, but he saw nothing to make him think that it had "altered the way in which we make war today."

Although he rates as Britain's top military figure of the war, and is presently chairman of the Chiefs of Staffs of the Western Union Alliance, "Monty" spoke but little of military matters.

Instead, he surprised his audience by an address of an "inspirational" sort in which he stressed the importance to the future of human relations and leadership. If nothing else, his views on these subjects were noncontroversial.

Public Testing of Color Video Called for by FCC in Dispute

Two days of comparative tests for proposed color television systems ended yesterday in a criss-cross of conflicting claims. The issue of regular operations still was far from a decision.

Industry representatives again voiced the divergent points of view which they have championed during the two-month-long inquiry by the Federal Communications Commission into the status of color televising.

The commission itself, recessing the whole proceeding until next February, called on the color broadcasting sponsors for a period of intensive field testing of their systems with a "representative cross section of the public" getting a look and registering their reactions.

The FCC field testing notice was directed to Radio Corp. of America, Columbia Broadcasting System and Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco, which are now proposing three different color broadcasting techniques for commercial operations.

The commission said each of these companies should, as soon as possible, get "a reasonable number" of color receivers or color converters into the hands of "both technical and non-technical persons" in selected areas. Then, the commission said, the companies should set up at least an hour a day of color broadcasting for at least 30 days so that operations away from laboratory technicians and under average home conditions might be surveyed.

Details of these experiments were left to the companies. However, commission sources indicated that the New York City, Washington, San Francisco, and possibly Philadelphia areas would figure in the tests. It was also assumed that since the equipment is strictly for temporary use, it would be placed in selected homes on a loan basis, without charge.

The two days of comparative tests closed yesterday involved the RCA and CBS color systems, with the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories showing the same program material in black-and-white, for comparative purposes. Color Television, Inc., will be included in a further side-by-side comparison here in February.

Boy, 11, Is Sole Survivor of 35 Down in Norway Air Crash

Oslo, Norway, Nov. 22 (AP).—An 11-year-old Jewish refugee boy emerged today as the sole survivor of a plane wreck that brought death to 34 persons—27 other children and 7 adults.

He is Isaac Allal, 11. His two brothers and a sister were among the dead. All 28 children were being flown from Tunisia to Norway for six months' rest and rehabilitation when their Dutch transport plane lost its bearings and crashed Sunday night.

The twin-engined DC-3 transport, object of a four-nation sea, air and land search, was carrying four Dutch crewmen and three nurses in addition to the children.

Isaac was sitting in his chair at the very tail of the plane when rescuers reached the scene.

He blinked and said in halting French he felt "not bad."

Isaac was able to walk but was hustled on a stretcher to an ambulance and taken to the hospital at Drammen, 10 miles away. There the chief physician described his injuries as a scratched nose, a swollen wrist and slight burns.

Over a hill little more than a mile away from the crash, was a farmhouse but no one there heard the smash-up.

So little Isaac sat amid the bodies, among them his brothers, Victor-Haim and Daniel, and his sister, Rachel, until the rescuers arrived.

The plane was chartered by the American Joint Distribution Committee to ferry underfed Jewish refugee children from Tunisia to Norway for rehabilitation before emigration to Israel.

Tunis, Tunisia, Nov. 22 (AP).—The family of Isaac Allal, which lost three children in the crash of a plane in Norway, today mourned a fourth child. A 17-year-old son fell dead when he learned of their deaths.

Housing Aim Called Family Life Threat

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Nov. 22.—The Nation's organized property promoters, 44,000 strong, have put on their war paint. They are out to battle Government spending, Government "competition," rent control and the withholding tax.

More than 4000 delegates gathered here for the forty-second annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards adopted a statement of policy today that called for home ownership "in the American way."

Public housing, of which 4000 units are to be built soon in the District of Columbia, was condemned as destructive to family life because "children have to look to Government rather than to their parents for shelter."

The realtors' policy statement recommended that a privately financed secondary mortgage bank be created to replace the Federal National Mortgage Association, which expires March 1, 1950. "Fannie May," as the agency is known in the trade, buys GI and FHA home mortgages from banks and brokers. Supplying them with new funds to lend for home purchases.

Direct Lending Opposed

Direct lending in any form by the Federal Government, however, was vigorously opposed by the realty group.

Dissatisfaction with Federal Housing Administration policies was evident. NAREB, whose members process mortgage insurance applications through FNMA, seeks an amendment to the National Housing Act to provide for appointment of a board of directors for the FHA drawn from the building industry and operating similarly to the Federal Reserve Board.

Lobbying of the American Medical Association against "socialized medicine" proposals was hailed by the realtor group, which urged that the Constitution be amended to prohibit the Federal Government from engaging in any business customarily conducted by private enterprise.

Along the same lines, the group said it would continue to fight "socialized housing" proposals on State and local levels now that Congress has authorized funds for 810,000 units in the next five years. While resisting subsidized housing as public policy, NAREB will seek an amendment to the housing act of 1949 limiting occupancy in all public housing to the indigent and excluding Government employes as tenants.

Leave for D. C. Today

Washington delegations to the NAREB convention and to the fifty-seventh annual convention of the United States Savings and Loan League, the latter in session at the Palmer House, will leave Wednesday morning for Washington.

Oliver M. Walker, president of the Washington Real Estate Board, late last night conferred by phone with Washington attorneys regarding the Supreme Court's ruling to review dismissal by lower courts of a suit charging NAREB and the Washington board with violation of anti-trust laws. The suit accused the groups of setting up rigid charges for sales of property.

Walker said the action of the Supreme Court in agreeing to rehear the case proves the issue is of national importance.

"When decided, it will affect many thousands of persons in the real estate business and related field of personal service whose charges are regulated by custom," he said.

"The Washington Real Estate Board will vigorously defend its position as upheld by the lower court, which we believe properly interpreted the law. One of the major objectives of our organization is to protect the general public in the purchasing of homes. We recommend that brokers do not charge a commission in excess of the rates which have been established by custom as being fair."

Local realtors customarily charge a 5-percent commission in most sales of used homes, with a sliding scale on sales in large new home subdivisions.

Robert P. Gerholz, Flint, Mich., was elected president of NAREB. He is a past president of the National Association of Home Builders and is now serving as chairman of the realtors' Washington committee, the legislative committee of NAREB, which has tangled so often with President Truman over rent control and public housing. Gerholz will be inaugurated as 1950 president at ceremonies in Washington, D. C., early next year, succeeding T. H. Maenner, Omaha.

Vinson, Kilday Would Retain Medical Care for Service Kin

By the United Press

Two congressional military committee leaders joined yesterday in opposition to a proposal to take away free medical service from dependents of service personnel.

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee and Representative Kilday (D., Tex.) a high-ranking committee member, disclosed they are formally protesting the proposal to President Truman and Secretary of Defense Johnson.

The suggestion that military dependents be deprived of free medical service in the Army and Navy hospitals and by service doctors was raised last week by Budget Director Frank Pace, jr.

He said the service should be cut off in this country, except in remote areas, because recent pay raises given military personnel put them in a better position to foot the medical bills of their dependents.

The decision, Kilday said, is up to Mr. Truman and Johnson.

But, the Texan told newsmen, when Congress boosted the pay of service personnel at its recent session, it took into consideration the fact that dependents have been receiving free or reduced-rate medical attention.

Except for this fact, he intimated, the pay raises might have been larger.

Kilday said the Navy claims to have legal backing for free medical service for its personnel and it probably would take an act of Congress to eliminate it.

As a matter of long practice, if not a law, he said, Army personnel have, since the days of the Continental Army, been given the privilege of obtaining medical service in Army hospitals for their dependents.

FAO CONFERENCE—President Harry S. Truman (right), who told FAO members yesterday that the world food situation may be solved by "working together in this organization," chats with Dr. Oscar Gans, permanent chairman of the FAO

Truman Pledges Nation's Aid To Shift World Food Surplus

Charles F. Brannan, his military aide, Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, and officials of FAO as he mounted the platform.

Dr. Oscar Gans, Cuban Ambassador and chairman of the FAO Conference, in a 42-word introduction referred to him as "an eminent citizen of the world, author of a doctrine of economic and social justice, the Fair Deal." He then shouted:

"His Excellency, Harry S. Truman, has the floor!" to a standing ovation.

Mr. Truman got rounds of applause all through the short speech, particularly on two occasions. First, when he invited FAO to locate in the United States, and second, when he said:

"It is one mark of civilization to be able to produce abundantly. It is a more important mark to be able to use abundance for the welfare of mankind.

"The United States is glad to work with FAO toward the goal of increasing the production of food and improving its distribution. We regard this as a major cooperative endeavor toward our common objective of a stable and peaceful world."

The talk, however, left delegates arguing whether some of Mr. Truman's remarks could be taken as encouragement of the controversial International Commodity Clearing House proposed by a committee of experts, and urged by Director-General Norris E. Dodd.

That proposal, however, drew a bitter attack from the Irish delegate, James M. Dillon. Dillon called the ICCH "an elaborate device to get around the nonconvertibility of currencies." "We are getting together," he said, "another elaborate piece of machinery with bits of string.

"Will somebody interpret for me what a food surplus is?" he shouted. "Is it wheat at $1.80 a bushel. Lower the price to $1.20 and see how quickly the surplus will disappear."

Today the delegates will begin debate on the permanent site for FAO.

Montgomery County Urged As FAO Headquarters Site

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations was urged yesterday by the Montgomery County Council to select a site in Montgomery County for its permanent headquarters.

The council, in a resolution directed to the Secretary of State, also expressed its desire to "cooperate and assist in facilitating the successful operation of such headquarters."

The FAO, now meeting in Washington, has the selection of a headquarters location on its agenda.

Three Montgomery sites have been advanced for consideration. They are: the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center, southwest of Bradley blvd. and Wisconsin ave.; another location to the west of the center, and one just north of the Dalecarlia Reservoir.

Also at yesterday's council meeting, County Manager Irving G. McNayr reported that work by the State Roads Commission on elimination of an open ditch in the 200 block of E. Franklin st., Silver Spring, has been postponed because of objection by property owners to the proposed location of an underground pipe line. Residents feared the ditch was a possible polio source.

He said SRC District Engineer Edward G. Duncan will make the survey to determine the edge of the State's right-of-way before proceeding.

McNayr also announced that supplemental rabies vaccination stations would be open December 2 at the Takoma Park Health and Welfare Center from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and on December 3 at the Silver Spring Armory from noon to 2 p. m.

A total of 2250 dogs were vaccinated last Saturday at seven stations set up following the establishment of a rabies quarantine in the Takoma Park-Silver Spring area by the council last week.

The council approved issuance of seven million dollars of bonds by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for increasing water supply facilities, extension of water and sewer mains and construction of storm water drains.

Plutonium in Pure Form Isolated by French

Paris, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—The French Atomic Energy Commission announced today the isolation of one-thousandth of a gram of plutonium, making this nation one of the few in the world known to possess this highly explosive man-made element in pure form.

The tiny amount of plutonium is not explosive, although a few million times that amount, brought together with sufficient force, constitutes an atomic bomb.

New Methods Biggest Need, Chamber Aide Tells Admen

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—A challenge to those engaged in advertising to answer their critics "not only by creating a better public understanding of the purpose and functions of advertising, but also by cleaning the stables where necessary" was voiced tonight by Leonard W. Trester, chairman of the advertising committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Addressing the Roanoke Advertising Club here, Trester emphasized the need for interpretation in simple and straightforward terms of all phases of distributors, including advertising.

Cites Investigations

"In Congress we see investigation after investigaton being made into the subject of distribution costs. Witnesses before the House Judiciary Subcommittee on monopoly have made far-fetched statements that advertising would increase if big business were wiped out. This subcommittee is going very deeply into the subject of distribution costs, methods and regulation.

"The Federal Trade Commission has been looking with a jaundiced eye on distribution methods which in particular lines are inseparable from nationally advertised brands. These include uniform delivered pricing, resale price maintenance, exclusive dealerships and demonstrators in department stores. The Senate Agriculture Committee is making an exhaustive study of the spread between farm prices and those paid by the ultimate consumer.

"Circulation Tripled"

"Consumer publications, generally critical of our distribution system and of its keystone—advertising—have tripled in circulation since the war. Also, according to the Psychological Corporation, the number of people who believe advertising increases the cost of goods is at an all-time high.

"Finally, another indication of widespread misunderstanding is the fact that two thirds of the entries in the recent A. F. A. national essay contest on advertising had to be rejected either because they had no constructive ideas to offer or were highly critical of the entire advertising process."

Congress Warned by Eccles Of Nine Inflationary Trends

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Nation faces increasing inflation in the immediate future, but must take steps to avoid a depression before long, Marriner S. Eccles, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, warned Congress yesterday.

The long-time member and former chairman of the board summed up his view of the economic picture at a hearing of the Joint Congressional Economic subcommittee which is studying all aspects of the Government's fiscal policy.

Eccles listed nine points which he said contributed to inflationary developments.

They were:

1. Bank credit is beginning "to expand a little."

2. There is an "excessive increase" in consumer credit. Installment buying is growing at an "excessively rapid" rate and credit terms are getting easier.

3. There is a huge growth in housing credits on very small down payments.

4. State and local governments are rapidly increasing the size of their debts.

5. The Federal Government is spending in the red at a five-billion-dollar a year rate.

6. More than $2,800,000,000 in benefits will be paid out to veterans next year.

7. In the field of agriculture, farm price supports are also sustaining "an inflationary level."

8. The present labor-wage policy is also contributing to inflation. Organized labor is seeking another round of wage increases, which may well be reflected in increased prices.

9. The private corporation pension plans, which Eccles termed "a big mistake," is another factor. These plans, he said, have the effect of wage increases and tend to hold prices up.

Eccles urged Congress to vest the Federal Reserve Board with more power to regulate banking practices and the ups-and-downs of the money market.

His views on more Federal Reserve powers were bluntly challenged by Edward E. Brown, president of the First National Bank of Chicago.

to give the Federal Reserve abso-

Brown termed Eccles' proposals lute authority over credit policy a "highly dangerous doctrine."

"No body of men . . . not even the Federal Reserve Board should have that much power," Brown declared. He said no body of men could possess sufficient wisdom to be sure that such a power over the economic life of the Nation was being exercised wisely.

Brown also disagreed with eccles' idea that bank regulation should be used as an instrument in national credit policy. The two should be "divorced entirely," Brown said.

The best way to strengthen the Federal Reserve Board, Brown said, is to give its members longer terms, and increase the salaries of members so that strong men will be attracted to it.

Thomas' Pique Laid to Secret Data Quest

By Robert S. Allen

Inside reason for Senator Elmer Thomas' peeve at Sweden was a rub and not a snub.

The rub arose as a result of the Oklahoman's demanding information regarding certain secret United States military aid that Swedish officials felt they could not divulge.

He and his group had no difficulty in Sweden—until Thomas attempted to interrogate military officials on the "sensitive" arms-aid they are getting from the United States.

This aid is in the highest classified category. Its nature is known only to a few top officials in both countries. Thomas has no authorization from anyone to seek information on it. His demand was wholly a personal matter.

Thomas' threat to retaliate against Sweden is empty talk. He has little power to do anything either on ECA or the arms-aid program.

Maj. Joe Foss to Seek Dakota Governorship

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Nov. 22 (AP). Maj. Joe Foss of World War II aerial fame is going after the South Dakota governorship.

Foss, 34, said today he would be a Republican candidate for nomination at the 1950 primary, the first Tuesday in June. He is commander of the State's air national guard, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Foss won the Congressional Medal for his exploits as a Marine flier in the South Pacific.

West German Pact Airing Set Thursday

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 22 (AP).—The three Allied high commissioners agreed with Chancellor Konrad Adenhauer tonight on new powers and concessions to be granted Western Germany. Agreement was also reached on what Western Germany will do in return.

Details will be revealed Thursday in the first detailed disclosure of agreements reached by the United States, British and French foreign ministers in their Paris meeting on Germany, and the results of the commissioners' talks with Adenauer based on the agreements.

Adenauer will deliver a report to the West German Parliament Thursday telling what the Western powers have offered to do for his government and what promises he has given on his government's behalf.

A high Allied official said the agreement will contain all the results achieved at the Paris meeting.

In a partial report on the Paris decisions last week, Adenauer said the Allies had offered to slow down and possibly reduce the dismantling of German factories for reparations; to permit Germany to build bigger and faster merchant ships; to permit Germany to establish consulates abroad and join some international organizations.

Official Protest

British Assail Mail Seizure By Russians

Berlin, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The British have protested strongly to the Soviet military administration over interference with the passage of mail trains to Berlin and demanded the return of seized mail, it was announced today.

The protest, sent by Maj. Gen. Goeffrey K. Bourne, British commander in Berlin, charged the Russians with violating the agreement governing lifting of the Berlin blockade.

It said Soviet officers at the zonal border town of Marienborn "interfered" on the nights of November 16-17 and November 17-18 with mail trains traveling from Hannover in the British zone to the British sector of Berlin.

Bourne's protest said:

"Such interference with the free passage of mail trains between western Germany and Berlin is a violation of the New York agreement of May, 1949, between the foreign ministers and the one at Paris regarding the facilitation of the movement of persons and goods between the western zones and Berlin."

Chile Calls Soviet Super Capitalist

Lake Success, Nov. 22 (AP).—Chile told the United Nations today the Soviet Union is a super-capitalist, imperialist, totalitarian, police state whch has revised Marxst teachings to suit its own expansionist purposes.

Russian Delegates Andrei Y. Vishinsky and Dmitri Z. Manuilsky of the Ukraine let these words from Chile's Hernan Santa Cruz pass without challenge. But they yelled a few minutes later he was insulting Prime Minister Stalin and the Communist Party with other remarks.

The stormy exchange broke out in the General Assembly's Political Committee debate on Russia's proposal for a Big Five peace pact and a rival Western ylan to reaffirm the peace pledges in the U. N. Charter.

Santa Cruz told the committee acts of the Soviet foreign commissariat and of the "international Stalinist organization" are coordinated. Manuilsky interrupted to say Stalin had been insulted. Committee Chairman Lester B. Pearson said he saw no insult.

Vishinsky broke in later when Santa Cruz urged the Soviet Foreign Minister to remember "actions which occurred 10 years ago, when the Communist Parties and the Communist press became propaganda agents for the German armies."

Pearson examined the remark and ruled it was not an insult.

Santa Cruz called on the Russians to abandon fifth column tactics, disband international Communist organizations and respect the sovereignty of states if they really want peace.

Britain Refuses U. N. Flag Use In Trust Areas

Lake Success, Nov. 22 (AP).—Britain gave notice today that she will not fly the United Nations flag over territories she administers as trust areas for the United Nations and will not tolerate "dictation" on how she runs these or her own colonies.

John Fletcher-Cooke, British delegate, announced what amounts to a British boycott of one whole section of United Nations endeavor.

9 U. N. Applications To Be Reconsidered

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—The United Nations Assembly voted overwhelmingly today to have the Security Council reconsider applications from nine countries barred from U. N. membership by Russian vetoes.

In separate balloting on nine Australian resolutions, the Assembly called on the 11-nation council to take up again the bids of Austria, Ceylon, Finland, Ireland, Italy, Hashemite Jordan, the Republic of Korea (South Korea), Portugal and Nepal.

He said his government felt the United Nations majority at the current Assembly session had acted in violation of the San Francisco charter in regard to the trust areas—10 former German and Japanese colonies and League of Nations mandates assigned to Britain and other administrators.

He said this was true "even more seriously," in regard to colonial areas proper, such as the nonself-governing parts of Britain's empire.

The London Daily Express, which opposes the British Labor government, said editorially last week that Britain ought to pull out of the U. N. rather than have the British Empire wrecked "by an unholy alliance of Arabs, South Americans and Asiatics" it said were working to that end through the United Nations.

Air Force Cargo Plane With 6 Aboard Missing

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—An Air Force C-54 cargo plane with six aboard was missing and presumed down in the Pacific Northwest tonight. The Air Force announced the plane's gasoline limit had expired at 10 p. m. (EST).

The C-54 was on a round-trip navigational flight from McChord Field, Wash., to Portland airport to practice instrument approach.

7th St. Fire Damage Put at Over $100,000; Blaze Traced to Blankets on Storage Floor

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

HOT SPOT—Two firemen, one on the aerial ladder and one on a smaller ladder, inch toward upper-floor windows of the Harry Kaufman department store, 1316 7th st. nw., to join comrades inside fighting the four-alarm fire. The early-morning blaze tied up traffic and streetcars bound for the downtown section. Damage was put at $100,000

Some of Santa Claus' stock went up in smoke yesterday when a four-alarm fire swept the Harry Kaufman, Inc., department store, 1316-1328 7th st. nw.

Bertam Wise, a store executive, estimated damage would exceed $100,000.

An 8th st. resident sounded the first alarm at 8:55 a. m. when he saw smoke swirling from a window. Other alarms were given at 9:01, 9:06 and 9:13 a. m.

Traffic Snarled Two Hours

Traffic on 7th st. was snarled for about two hours while firemen fought the blaze. The fire was brought under control in about 90 minutes.

The fire apparently started in blankets stored on the second floor at 1326 7th st., and spread to the third and fourth floors of a four-story annex at 1328 7th st.

The upper three floors of the annex are used for storage, the men's clothing department is on the ground floor and Christmas toys were on display in the basement.

Investigators said the fire might have been set off by a short circuit.

Smoke Routs Neighbors

Smoke forced evacuation of three apartments over the Plitt optometrist and jewelry store at 1330 7th st., immediately adjoining the Kaufman annex.

One of the tenants, Mrs. Hilda Maki, 79, refused to leave her second-floor apartment until she had her blind, 9-year-old fox terrier, Lisa, safely in her grasp.

Capt. Clyde N. Strange, commanding officer of the Second Precinct, led the aged woman and her dog to safety.

Firemen spread tarpaulins over the merchandise counters on the first floor of the annex, but damage from fire, smoke and water on the upper floors was extensive.

Christmas Stock Damaged

Firemen said the second floor was burned through, that the flames had reached the roof at one point, and that much of the store's Christmas stock had been destroyed.

Firemen tossed charred blankets, clothing and furniture, and displays which once had been brightly colored, from the upper windows. They were forced to chop through partitions on the upper floors.

Store employes said the basement was flooded.

The property which the store occupies is owned by two brothers, Bertram and Dave Wise, who are also executives of Harry Kaufman, Inc.

Employes Unaware At First

Although the store does not open until 9:30 a. m., Bertram Wise and a half-dozen employes were in the section of the store, at 1316 7th st., when the smoke was first observed.

He said they did not know there was a fire until engines pulled up in front.

Roy Warfield, acting fire marshal, said damage could run to $100,000 or more, but added he thought much of the material could be salvaged.

The four alarms brought out 37 pieces of Fire Department equipment, including 12 engine companies, five truck companies and a rescue squad.

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad sent its wagon and an ambulance to the scene to assist. The volunteers from Maryland handed out 17 gallons of hot coffee to the firefighters, who were handicapped by the cold weather.

The Friendship Fire Association, a District organization, also dispatched its coffee wagon.

Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew was at the scene, assisted by his deputy chief and three battalion chiefs.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett directed police operations at the scene. All available motorcycle men and scout cars from several precincts were rushed to handle traffic.

Streetcar traffic past the store was at a halt for two hours. Buses picked up the stranded passengers and carried them on to their destinations. Some cars were rerouted.

Streetcars began moving normally at about 11 a. m. when the fire hoses were bridged over the cars.

Marriage Rate Here Continues to Decline

Marriages in Washington, as throughout the Nation, are still on the decrease, the National Office of Vital Statistics, Federal Security Agency, reported yesterday.

In September, 931 marriage licenses were issued here compared to 1021 during the same month in 1948. The city's September birth rate showed a 1 percent increase over the same period last year. The death rate remained almost constant.

Chiang Offer To Appease Li Reported

Hongkong (Wednesday), Nov. 23 (AP).—Chiang Kai-shek today reportedly offered Acting President Li Tsung-jen his long-demanded chance to fight the civil war his own way, with Li's own general in supreme command.

The China Mail said it had learned from sources close to Li that the dramatic offer was made in a personal letter from Chiang in Chungking to Li, now in this British crown colony.

The newspaper said this was the gist of the Chiang offer:

Li to return to Chungking. Li to have full presidential powers. As a further concession, he may appoint his friend, Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, as commander of the Nationalists' army, navy and air forces. This is something Li has been reported demanding all along.

Li has balked at Chiang's policy of trading space for time. Li is said to have favored the risk of a decisive battle with the Communists in an attempt to get United States military aid.

4 Romanian Army Officers To Die as Spies

Bucharest, Romania, Nov. 22 (U.P.). Reliable sources said tonight that four high-ranking Romanian army officers, including a former assistant intelligence chief of the general staff, have been sentenced to death as spies for an undisclosed foreign power.

They said 22 other army officers were sentenced to terms ranging from five years to life imprisonment in a trial held about a week ago.

The doomed intelligence official was identified only as Lieut. Col. Tretorian, a former assistant chief of the general staff's intelligence department. The names of the other 25 men reportedly sentenced could not be ascertained.

The sources said all the defendants had been found guilty of turning over vital military information to a foreign power—"most probably the United States."

It was reported that only 20 of the 26 defendants were present at the trial. The other six—reportedly including one of those sentenced to death—were tried in absentia.

Johnston Will Seek Postmaster Pay Hike

Some 42,000 postmasters in all parts of the country are next in line for a Federal pay boost if Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) has his way.

"I have introduced a bill to correct the inequalities in pay for postmasters and supervisory personnel," he said. "Our committee will start hearings early next session."

Ward Verdict Is Due Soon; 'Trumped Up' Charges Heard

Prime Minister Nehru has indicated early recognition of the Chinese Communists, the Ministry of External Affairs said Acheson's call for a protest was "under consideration."

In Moscow, however, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda attacked the American Legion for having urged forceful action to set Ward free. The Legion "is not frightening anyone," Pravda said. "In such provocative statements by imperialists there is as much impotency as there is wrath."

American "impotency" to help Ward was not denied here—except for the fact that the United States might rouse opinion in the non-Soviet world against Ward's captors. The United States could even take the matter before the United Nations, but this would not get Ward out of jail if the Communists in China were determined to keep him.

Senator William F. Knowland of California said in Manila yesterday that he had proposed an American naval blockade of Communist China to President Truman, and thought it "might produce results." But officials here steadfastly rejected any idea of a show of force, on the ground that it would embroil the United States dangerously and might lead to Ward's death at Chinese hands.

Some officials thought there might be a connection between Ward's arrest and the American arrest of Valentin Gubitchev in New York in spite of strenuous Soviet protests.

Urey Assails 'Federalist' Stand; Quits

Minneapolis, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Dr. Harold C. Urey, atomic physicist and Nobel prize winner, today announced that he had resigned his position as a United World Federalist director because he cannot agree with the UWF stand on Russia.

"Democracy and tyranny cannot work together," the University of Chicago professor said. "Not until the Russian dictatorship is gone can we accept Russia as a partner in world government."

Urey was here to address the Minnesota Atlantic Union Committee. He said he sent his letter of resignation from the office and from the organization to former UWF President Cord Meyers yesterday.

San Juan, P. R., Nov. 22 (U.P.). Dr. R. E. Lapp, consultant to the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, urged today that a billion-dollar agency be created to spy on Russia.

Lapp, who served on the Manhattan Project, said Russia's development of the atom bomb two years before the best official American estimates was "palpable evidence of a major deficiency in our national security setup."

In an address as the special guest of the University of Puerto Rico, Lapp also made the following recommendations:

1. A Federal law limiting the height of metropolitan buildings.
2. Nationwide disaster planning and gradual industrial decentralization.
3. Use of psychological warfare against Russia to back up Marshall Plan and military aid to Europe.

U. S. Inept in Intelligence

"It is common knowledge that we Americans have been quite inept in the field of intelligence operations," Lapp said.

"The mere administrative reorganization of a Government agency is no guarantee that this situation will change.

"The Russians developed their bomb at least two years before the date the best official estimates indicated they would. Here, indeed, is palpable evidence of a major deficiency in our national security set up.

"We were wrong about the first Russian test. We cannot afford to be wrong again. The next test may take place over an American city.

"In terms of dollars and cents I believe we should be willing to appropriate one billion dollars a year for this purpose."

Threat for New York

Warning that Russia can be expected to use psychological warfare, Lapp said:

"As the months go by, New Yorkers may become increasingly aware of the fact that Russia has atomic bombs.

"While I don't expect that New York will become a ghost city, I cannot help feeling that the number of neurotics in that city will increase."

Lapp concluded that the possibility of an atomic war "argues for our throwing our last ounce of effort into the United Nations as an instrument for world peace."

Plans for Moving Defense Plants Inland Denounced

Representative Joseph T. Patterson (R., Conn.) yesterday opposed relocation inland of big coastal industries and accused the military departments of "scare talk."

In a letter to Representative John E. Fogarty (D., R. I.), he promised to cooperate with a bipartisan group of legislators organizing to oppose industry dispersal from the coastal and Great Lakes region.

Patterson termed it "inconceivable" that defense planners should be planning to shift more industries inland, saying that "in this atomic age all areas of America are vulnerable."

ic weapons. He declared Hickenlooper's "first and more significant reaction to the Russian bomb achievement was the notion that it could be useful to him as a politician."

In closing, Waymack said:

"I issue this statement regretfully, as a citizen with a sense of duty. The Nation's atomic energy development has been hurt already, in my sober judgment, substantially, by Senator Hickenlooper's long harassment. I do not think it is right for any man to risk injuring it further in a frenzied effort to make it appear that his own fiasco was not a fiasco.

"I have not the slightest personal animosity toward Senator Hickenlooper. I am sorry, not mad. This statement is that of an individual Iowa citizen, 11 months out of the atomic energy business. I have consulted nobody about it."

Iowa political observers in Washington see in the attack an almost insurmountable barrier to Hickenlooper's nomination or election next year. Waymack, a lifelong independent Republican, is one of Iowa's most revered citizens. Because he is known never to have harbored any political ambitions, his words have tremendous effect.

Hickenlooper is almost certain of opposition at the Republican primary next June. Some dopesters expect Gov. William S. Beardsley to run for the Senate, in which case they almost unanimously agree Hickenlooper will be defeated. If Beardsley chooses instead to run for a second term as Governor, it is believed that a candidate of the Beardsley wing of the party will oppose Hickenlooper.

In case Hickenlooper survives the primary, he will face a determined campaign by the Democrats to extend their last year's sweep of the senatorial and presidential elections in the State.

Most frequently mentioned prospective candidate on the Democratic ticket is Albert J. Loveland, Undersecretary of Agriculture.

Waymack is known to have deeply resented Hickenlooper's recent harsh attack on David Lilienthal, chairman of AEC, in which he accused the latter of "incredible mismanagement" of the atomic program. At that time, Waymack pointed out quietly to friends that while he was a member of the commission he at all times voted with Lilienthal. Thus, he reasoned, Hickenlooper's attack on Lilienthal was also an attack on him.

The investigation of AEC that followed Hickenlooper's early-summer attack failed to bear out his charges. Political observers believed that it cost him dearly among Iowa voters, and threatened his reelection. Apparently Hickenlooper felt the same way, because immediately upon the Senate's recess he returned to his home State and started a township-by-township electioneering tour.

The immediate cause of Waymack's attack this week was a comment about a news story in the Des Moines Sunday Register. This story, Hickenlooper asserted the next day, bore out his charges of "incredible mismanagement" and was evidence that "new, capable management" is needed for AEC.

Waymack, in his reply, declared he found the story "on the whole, very good," but that it "dealt with policy snarls involving the Government as a whole, not merely the Atomic Energy Commission."

Waymack, a former Pulitzer Prize winner for editorial writing, referred to the fact that both he and Hickenlooper approved of the story, although with different interpretations.

"Since I disagree completely with the Senators attitude," he said, "I concede that this apparent agreement between us has a very queer smell.

"It would appear that one of us wants to fool the people of Iowa. I would suggest that it is important for the people to find out which one of us it is."

Waymack then declared "one other specific thing in Senator Hickenlooper's statement warrants, I think, a special word."

He then quoted Hickenlooper as saying:

"We must recall that the Russians now have the bomb. Without doubt, loose administration by the commission enabled them to pick up information which advanced their timetable substantially."

To which Waymack remarked:

"The same assertion was made by the Senator in Washington immediately after the President announced that a Russian atomic explosion had been detected. He was rebuked then by one of his colleagues, who pointed out that the Senator had not a shred of evidence to support such a charge.

"It is interesting and perhaps illuminating that to our senior Senator the first and more significant reaction to the Russian bomb achievement was the notion that it could be useful to him as a politician."

Waymack indicated that he believed Hickenlooper's attack on the AEC was to get much needed political publicity.

"Senator Hickenlooper," he said, "has been in politics a long time. I therefore would certainly not dispute his apparent conclusion that he desperately needed a headline-grabbing issue for his reelection campaign.

"The emotion-charged atomic energy subject may have been a smart choice, if not indeed the only possible one.

"The Senator has had his run with that issue in Washington, with the famous 'prosecution' that followed his wild charges against the commission. It ended in dismal collapse. The whole world knows it.

"If the Senator came subsequently to yet another conclusion—the conclusion that Iowans are so peculiarly simple that they can be confused by mere repetition of charges already disproven or by variations of them that are equally unprovable—I venture, as a citizen with confidence in Iowans' intelligence, to think him mistaken again."

Czechs May Void Church Marriages

Prague, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The cabinet today approved a measure which would make Communist civil ceremonies the only valid form of marriage in Czechoslovakia and establish "deep and permanent family breakdown" as the only ground for divorce.

The bill must be approved by the National Assembly before becoming effective, but there seemed little doubt it would become law.

The official government news agency gave the following details of the proposed legislation:

1. After January 1, 1950, ceremonies before Communist-run national committees will be the only valid form of marriage. Church marriages will be permitted, but they will have no legal worth.

2. A married couple may choose to be known either by the husband's or the wife's family name, but the surname their children will bear must be chosen before the marriage.

3. The property of husband and wife will be considered communal property after the marriage, and the property of both may be claimed if one incurs a debt.

4. The legal age limit for marriage will be reduced from 21 to 18.

The news agency also announced that 168 more Slovakian priests had been released from jail after they pledged loyalty to the Communist regime.

Panama Police Blast Crowd Led by Chanis; 1 Dead, 9 Shot

Remon. Chiari was a second vice president and cousin of Remon.

The Assembly was in session to consider acceptance of Chanis' resignation. Chiari had been sworn into office before the Assembly knew anything about the coup.

Chanis shook with anger as he told the Assembly that "never in my life" would he have signed the resignation if he had not been under threat of attack from the police.

As the Assembly session ended, cries of "long live freedom" and "down with militarists" were heard.

Chanis was surrounded by cheering supporters. The PRA deputies made clear they were not defending Chanis—whose administration they had consistently opposed—but were supporting civil liberties.

Panama Coup Deplored By State Department

Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., said yesterday the United States "deplores" the forceful ousting of Panama's President Daniel F. Chanis, jr.

He emphasized that continued United States diplomatic relations with Panama does not mean this country approves of what happened.

Miller discussed the situation at a news conference. His statement, in effect, was a reiteration of United States policy in such situations as laid down by Secretary of State Acheson September 19 in a New York speech.

Miller recalled that Acheson said:

"We always deplore the action of any group in substituting its judgment for that of the electorate. We especially deplore the overthrow by force of a freely elected government. In such situations we do not cease to hope that the people will regain the right to choose their leaders."

Chanis was forced to resign from office over the weekend by a group of police chiefs headed by Col. Jose Antonio Remon.

The State Department on Monday declared it regarded the change in presidency as constitutional because Chanis was succeeded by Vice President Robert F. Chiari.

Chambers Describes Wadleigh Dealings

New York, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—Whittaker Chambers gave his own version today of his relations with Henry Julian Wadleigh between 1936 and 1938, when both, according to their own stories, were aiding a Communist spy ring.

Chambers, testifying in United States District Court in the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss, former State Department official, said Wadleigh delivered 10 to 25 government documents to him at meetings once a month or oftener during the two-year period. Mr. Chambers said the documents were photographed for the spy ring in Washington and returned to Wadleigh on each occasion. Chambers has said that documents he got from Hiss were photographed in Baltimore.

At the end of four and a half hours of cross-examination by Claude B. Cross, chief defense attorney, Chambers' testimony left the picture of his prewar Communist spy ring's operations more confused, if possible, than before. New names were introduced into the story without further identification; some persons who apparently were closely concerned in the case were referred to without being named; and Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy insisted that certain names appearing on a State Department memorandum should not be seen by either the jury, the defense counsel, or the court.

Judge Withholds Ruling

Judge Henry W. Goddard, stating that he did not wish to embarrass the State Department, took this issue under advisement.

Cross previously had indicated that the defense strategy in this trial will be to show that Wadleigh and his "confederates" gave Chambers the Government documents and other papers which Hiss is accused of giving him. Hiss is on trial on a two-count indictment alleging he committed perjury when he told a grand jury he had not given the documents and papers to Chambers. Wadleigh testified at the first trial which ended in a hung jury July 8, that he gave a different set of documents to Chambers.

Chambers Confirms Wadleigh

Chambers confirmed Wadleigh's story that the latter began transmitting Government documents to him in March, 1936, that the two men customarily met on a street corner in the evening and the documents were carried in a brief case. Chambers said he did not open the brief case, but turned it over to David Carpenter to do the photographing. He said Carpenter's real name was David Zimmerman.

Chamber salso agreed with Wadleigh that he introduced Wadleigh in 1937 to a man called Sasha and referred to as "the boss." Wadleigh said this happened near the end of the year; Chambers said it was early in 1937. Wadeigh sad Sasha did not have any right arm; Chambers said he did.

Chambers Identifies Sasha

Chambers further identified Sasha as Colonel Bykov, whom he has previously described as a Soviet master spy who originally asked Hiss to steal Government documents for the defense of the Soviet Union. Chambers said he did not tell Wadleigh that Sasha was Colonel Bykov, nor did he tell Hiss that Wadleigh was helping the spy ring.

For most of the day Cross repeated in abridged form the treatment with which his predecessor, Lloyd Paul Styker, sought to discredit Chambers in the first trial. He used many of the same words but nothing of Stryker's impassioned voice and gestures. He rehearsed many of the discrepancies in the various versions Chamber has given of his story, and discovered a few new ones.

With more subtlety than Stryker he occasionally asked Chambers, after revealing a discrepancy: "Then you lied either before that grand jury or before this court and jury here?" To which Chambers replied, self-satisfied and confident as ever: "That is right."

Body of Andrews GI Is Identified

Andrews Air Base authorities yesterday said they have identified the body of a man found hanged in an unfinished building on the base as Pfc. Clair J. Erpelding, 18, of Prichard, Ala.

The body, garbed in Army fatigues, was discovered shortly before 1 p. m. Monday. Death was said to be due to strangulation. Erpelding had been in the service since March 1, 1948, and based at Andrews since October 20. He was attached to the 1052d Maintenance Squad. Officials said no note was found.

Minn. Guard Admits Negroes

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 22 (AP).—An executive order permitting Negroes to enlist in the Minnesota National Guard, for the first time in history of the State, was signed by Gov. Luther Youngdahl today.

Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Nelson, adjutant general, and Negro leaders were present when the Governor signed the order decreeing:

"There shall be equality of opportunity and treatment for all, including the Negro citizens, who shall serve in the military and naval forces of the State without segregation into separate units."

General Nelson said New Jersey, Connecticut and Wisconsin, so far as he knows, are the only other States where Negroes have been integrated in the National Guard.

A year ago the War Department authorized Minnesota National Guard officials to set up a separate Negro unit, but Negro leaders and Governor Youngdahl turned down the offer on the ground that it still was tantamount to segregation.

"Minnesota Negro citizens, in accordance with our philosophy of justice and fair play, merit the right to membership in the National Guard without the humiliation of segregation," Governor Youngdahl said in the executive order.

Immunity Studied

Trial Delay Is Granted To Gubitchev

New York, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The espionage trial of Judith Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev was postponed today until December 27 after the Russian engineer finally engaged a lawyer to defend him.

Gubitchev

Abraham L. Pomerantz, one of the United States prosecutors of Nazi industrialists at the Nuernberg trials, was granted time to study the case and prepare a defense for Gubitchev which will be based on the Rusian's claim of diplomatic immunity.

Judge Sylvester Ryan agreed to a postponment after Pomerantz explained that Gubitchev mistakenly felt that if he retained a lawyer he would concede automatically that he was giving up his claim to diplomatic immunity.

"My client is not sullen, obdurate, nor crazily whimsical," the lawyer said. "This man does not hold contempt for the court. But he had a wholly misguided notion of his rights and his views apparently were acquired in his own country."

News Conference Off

President Truman yesterday decided to forego his regular news conference this week. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said the President "is terribly busy" getting ready for a three-week vacation at Key West, Fla., beginning next Monday.

Judge Permits New Suit Over Hesse Jewels

District Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut yesterday gave Attorney Joseph S. Robinson of New York 30 days to file a new suit to retain the famous Hesse crown jewels in the United States, and indicated that unless the new action has a better legal basis than the old he will dismiss it.

The action centers around Robinson's attempts to keep the jewels in this country so he can impress an attorney's lien against them for his fees.

The collection, worth between one million dollars and $1,500,000, was brought here after the war as evidence in the trial of three American officers accused of stealing them from the Kronberg Castle in Germany in 1945.

In June, 1948, the owners—Wolfgang, Prince of Hesse, and Margarethe, Landgrafin of Hesse—brought action against the Secretaries of Defense and Army, claiming that if the jewels were sent back to Germany they would be "dissipated" because "of chaotic conditions."

Assistant U. S. Attorney Ross O. Donoghue argued that Robinson's suit actually was brought for the Hesses. Donoghue maintained that the Hesses are classified as enemy aliens and as such cannot bring bring suit here.

It's the Same in 16 Languages . . .

The Washington Post

"SIMULTANEOUS INTERPRETATION" — The Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh (second from left), regent of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, speaks to members of the school's new Institute of Languages and Linguistics in an especially equipped room in the mansion at 1719 Massachusetts ave. nw. Students use the same type of simultaneous interpretation equipment as that serving United Nations delegates. Interpreters are in soundproof booths, as seen in back of the large table

Nursery-Electronics Method Used in Teaching Languages

The lessons of the nursery and the electronics laboratory are combined in Georgetown University's new language program, which may revolutionize such training.

Last month the University School of Foreign Service opened an Institute of Languages and Linguistics at 1719 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Yesterday reporters were invited to see how modern design is making a difference in the teaching of 16 languages to prospective diplomats, shipping moguls and international businessmen.

Prof. Leon E. Dostert, Institute director, who established the "simultaneous interpretation" equipment used at the United Nations, explained how the methods a mother uses in teaching her child to talk are adapted to the language training program.

For 10 weeks, just as a mother picks up a spoon, shows it to her offspring and then says the word over and over, so the students are given demonstrations in the form of magnified pictures, films and acted-out situations by the instructors.

During this period all training is in the language being taught and is given via tape recordings as well as classroom discussion. The tapes enable students to listen over and over to various exercises and then make recordings of their own.

In the second 10 weeks students are given written exercises, which they follow as they listen to tape recordings. "They thus hear and read the language at the same time," Dostert, General Eisenhower's interpreter during the war, explained.

The final 10 weeks are devoted to teaching students how to write the language, first by dictation from the tape recordings and then in the form of original compositions.

By this time students should have enough of a working knowledge to make them comfortable in a foreign country, Professor Dostert said.

Advanced students will use a multilingual conference room where the "simultaneous interpretation" facilities enable students to listen to speakers in English, French, Spanish, German or Russian merely by twisting a dial to the proper channel.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., founder and regent of the Foreign Service School, termed the institute a "venturesome educational experiment" which is attempting to adopt technological advances to improving language—"an essential to peace."

Arrest of 3 Admitted prisoners. The Hungarian decision was deferred.

The announcement said others also are held, but did not give details. It is understood Vogeler was seized on his way to Vienna by car.

The announcement said:

"Engineer Imre Geiger, managing director of the Standard Electric Co., Ltd., has been arrested while trying to cross the border illegally. He confessed to having committed large-scale espionage and spying activity.

"Upon the testimony of Imre Geiger and other evidence, the State Security Office also detained Robert Vogeler, an American citizen, and Edgar Sanders, a British citizen.

"They also confessed to having committed sabotage and espionage against the Hungarian People's Republic for a considerable time. Other members of the spying organization also were detained."

United States Minister Nathaniel P. Davis, immediately asked permission to talk with Vogeler. Foreign Minister Gyuta Kallai was reported to have promised to "forward the request to the proper authority."

The British consul asked permission to visit Sanders, who returned to Hungary as an accountant for the I. T. & T., after serving as a captain in the British military mission here immediately after the war.

A spokesman for I. T. & T., in New York said the Hungarian charges against Vogeler were "fantastic and entirely false."

He said Vogeler was doing a routine job in handling commercial business of the company, which has interests in Austria, Romania, Yugoslavia and Hungary.

(In Washington, State Department officials also suspected the arrests might foreshadow the seizure of the American-owned telephone properties in Hungary.

(The State Department said it was notified yesterday by the Hungarian foreign office, through the United States Legation at Budapest, of Vogeler's arrest. The message said he was charged with being implicated in the "attempted escape" of Geiger, as well as with sabotage and espionage.)

D. C. Doctors Study Cost Of Illness

District doctors have begun special studies here of the costs of hospitalization illness and the patient's income.

What they want to know, simply, is how much each illness which requires hospitalization does cost, and how that cost conforms with the patient's ability to pay.

The study project, quietly begun two weeks ago, is sponsored jointly by the District Medical Society and the Medico-Chirurgical Society of the District of Columbia, Inc.

Already, patients at Sibley Memorial, Garfield Memorial and Columbia Hospitals have been interviewed by the study staff investigators, and other patients at Emergency and Episcopal Hospitals are scheduled to be interviewed this week.

The survey findings, said Dr. Karl C. Corley, chairman of the District society's committee on medical care, should prove an invaluable guide to the medical profession and other groups "in dealing with economic problems relating to medicine in the District."

United States Public Health Service, Dr. Corley said, has assumed responsibility for the technical aspects of the study. Completion of the interviews and correlaton of the findings may require another six weeks, it was said.

Sicilian Police Battle Squatters

Catania, Sicily, Nov. 22 (AP).—Fighting broke out in many parts of Cantania Province today when a "land march" by thousands of peasants ran into police resistance.

Police used armored cars to halt thousands of land-hungry peasants who were attempting to seize one property and injured three of them.

A small army of peasants swarmed over 12,000 acres of private farmland Monday in a mass invasion. Such movements started in the Calabrian "deep south" of the Italian mainland a month ago and then spread to eastern Sicily.

Government authorities turned down a request of the Communist-dominated Italian General Confederation of Labor for a conference with landowners. Authorities said they would sponsor no parleys until the seized lands are vacated.

Barkley Bride Asks Embrace On Chilly 'Shangri-La' Beach

Sea Island, Ga., Nov. 22 (AP).—A beaming Vice President and his pretty bride took life easy in their honeymoon retreat today—"doing as much of nothing as possible."

Alben Barkley and the new second lady of the land took a brief walk among the palms and along the pounding surf at this sunny resort, joking with some of the other 25 newlyweds here.

But mostly they enjoyed the privacy of their handsome, secluded apartment by the sea.

The Vice President, who celebrates his seventy-second birthday here Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, married the former Mrs. Carleton Hadley, 38, in St. Louis Friday.

Outside they made a big hit with vacationers. "They're sports," observed one. "Mr. Barkley acts like one of our 22-year-old grooms," commented the manager of the Cloister Hotel.

The Nation's most celebrated honeymooners walked arm in arm or holding hands.

"Put your arms around me and warm me up a little," said Mrs. Barkley.

"That's the first and the last time I'll have to be urged," said the grinning Veep.

Barkley said he had no plans except to relax. The couple will visit here until December 2, when the Vice President will address the Jackson-Jefferson Day dinner in New York. They plan to return here or honeymoon in Florida for most of December.

Taft Is Considering U. S. Pension Plan

the idea of a basic uniform Federal plan frankly based on taxation through current Federal tax. This tax could be on payrolls, but I doubt it should be related to the future rise in payment of particular employes.

"In addition to his basic plan, we might even authorize and provide special funds to be created for particular industries and set up in a manner decided upon by the employers and the employes in such industries.

"The payments might be made by employer or by employe, or both, out of profit or out of payroll; they might be graded and provide specific sums, but I do not think they should be varied because of any change in the basic Federal plan."

Estimating it would cost 12 billion dollars annually to pay $100 monthly pensions to all at 65, he said no such sum can be paid out of any pension fund accumulated on a sound actuarial basis.

So huge a reserve would have to purchase most of the property in the country, he said. He argued that a reserve in Government bonds "would be no reserve at all."

"The truth is," he said, "that the only way pensions can be paid to millions who are retired and are not working is out of the current earnings of those who are working."

Taft did not say what form of tax should be levied to finance a uniform pension. If it is on payrolls, levied either against the employer or employe, it would probably be passed on to the consumer in the price of the finished product, he said.

Through a profit-sharing plan he said the taxes might be paid out of corporation profits; they could be raised by general taxation on income or sales; they could even be raised by a transaction tax as proposed by the Townsend plan.

"But," concluded the Ohioan, "taxation it must ultimately be, and the question we are to face frankly is whether our economy can stand that tremendous burden without deterring industry as well as the worker and reducing too much the worker's standard of living."

Taft said the project would prove more costly even than the Administration's "much-advertised program of free medical care for 140 million people," estimated to cost less than seven billion dollars.

He noted nonetheless that millions are not covered by Federal old-age insurance, financed in large part by general taxation. He stressed also the lack of uniformity in other plans, ranging from the railroad retirement system to the AT & T company pension plan.

He said it all added up to this question: Should we try to impose some uniform system? His conclusion: That Congress at least ought to look into it.

It was the twenty-third column in Taft's "Washington Report" series, distributed weekly in metal plate form to Ohio weekly and daily newspapers as part of his preelection campaign.

Taft, who has been making eight to 12 speeches a day all over Ohio since September 3, in a "get-acquainted" trial run for his 1950 campaign, will wind up his 100-day circuit on December 2. By that date he will have stumped 76 of Ohio's 88 counties. He will tour the other 12 early next year.

Benton Reported Choice for Senate

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 22 (AP).—The Hartford Times said today that Gov. Chester Bowles (D.), definitely has decided to appoint William Benton of Southport to the United States Senate.

The name of Benton, Bowles' partner when they conducted an advertising business in New York, long has figured in speculation about the senatorial appointment. The Times' story today, however, was the first flat statement that Benton, once an Assistant Secretary of State, was to be the man.

There will be a vacancy in the Senate when Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.), resigns to take a seat on the Connecticut Supreme Court bench December 17.

Governor Bowles declined to comment on the Times' report.

Big Day and Bigger Weekend Due for All—Except Turkey and branches will also close Thursday.

For the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia, the weatherman anticipated cold and crisp "mostly fair" weather with little or no precipitation.

From yesterday's coldest day of the season, the weather is to turn warmer this afternoon and Thursday morning, colder by Thursday night, cold again Friday, with rising temperatures toward the end of the week.

The tradition of spending Thanksgiving Day with one's family will be observed by millions, led by President Truman.

Margaret to Miss Dinner

Guests at Blair House will include Mrs. David Wallace, mother of Mrs. Truman. The President's daughter, Margaret, on concert tour, will miss the dinner at home. But the weekend will see the family reunited, with the President attending a concert by Margaret here Sunday afternoon.

Other presidential plans include a trip to the Army-Navy football game at Philadelphia Saturday.

Train, plane and bus terminals here are expecting the big travel rush to begin this afternoon. All have scheduled extra facilities.

Union Station planned 50 extra outbound trains, including a score for the Army-Navy game. Extra flights were scheduled by the airlines, some of which will serve a special turkey dinner to air-borne travellers on the day.

Advice for Motorists

The roads also will be crowded and the American Automobile Association issued some well-chosen advice.

Urging that drivers "not use a gridiron victory or defeat as an excuse for drinking alcoholic beverages," the AAA added: "Don't take a nip at the bottle just because there's a nip in the air."

Special Thanksgiving dinners will be held for the children to see that the turkey is spread around.

Fifty children will have theirs at 6 p. m. today at Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N st. sw.

As the result of an idea which originated with the military policemen of Fort Belvoir's Provost Company, 70 children between 10 and 12 from the Industrial School Annex and St. Joseph's Home and School will tour the military post and enjoy a turkey dinner Thursday as guests of the Engineer Center Regiment's Headquarters Battalion.

Special Thanksgiving devotion services sponsored by the Military District of Washington will be held at noon today on the Pentagon Course, with 2500 persons expected to attend.

Other pre-Thanksgiving affairs include dances tonight at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., and the Officers Service Club of the United Nations, 1644 21st st. nw.

The Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs will hold their annual joint Thanksgiving meeting at 12:15 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Fourteen fifth and sixth grade children of Oak Street Elementary School, Falls Church, will give an original radio dramatization of "The First Thanksgiving" at 9:30 a. m. Thursday over Station WFAX.

Other Thanksgiving weekend festivities will include a dance Saturday night at the Noncommissioned Officers Club at Walter Reed Hospital.

Strategic Goods For Red Nations Blocked by U. S.

By The Associated Press

Recent attempts to slip nearly five million dollars worth of strategic goods from this country to Soviet-bloc nations were thwarted by the Commerce Department Secretary Sawyer reported yesterday.

His disclosure was made without elaboration in a report to President Truman and Congress on export control activities of his department in the months of July, August and September.

Other officials told a reporter that the attempts involved planned reshipments to Soviet-dominated areas of goods billed, they said, for Italy, France, Belgium, Holland, Sweden, Switzerland, India, Turkey and Egypt.

The goods included industrial chemicals useful in making explosives; rubber products such as heavy duty truck tires; certain electrical machinery and steel mill products; some aviation-grade gasoline and other oils; diamond dies, ballbearings and certain metals, including lead and electrolytic copper.

Airport Taxis

The major considerations in taxi service at the Washington National Airport about which there is so much grumbling are availability and regularity of service. It would be difficult for independent cab drivers or companies operating small fleets of cabs to guarantee that adequate service would be available at all times. Accordingly, there is some justification for the contract which the Civil Aeronautics Administration has let to Airport Transport, Inc., to carry all passengers outbound from the airport.

The arrangement, however, is by no means above question. Whatever the legality, the fact that the airport is a Federal enterprise makes the monopoly appear discriminatory. The monopoly contract in effect at the Union Station is not precisely similar, because the station is privately operated. Furthermore, it seems apparent that airport officials have been at least as much concerned with the revenue which the concession will produce as with the convenience of passengers.

For example, it is scarcely conceivable that Airport Transport will have sufficient cabs to pick up passengers all over the city. In other words, many persons who wish to get to the airport in a hurry will still use private cabs. And yet, under present arrangements, cab drivers will be understandably reluctant to make the trip because they are forbidden to pick up return fares at the airport. Obviously, if there is to be private cab service to the airport at all under such circumstances, passengers must expect to pay higher rates. Is this in the public interest?

The basic difficulty is, of course, that private cab operators already suffer from too intense competition in Washington, and they see a source of income cut off in the tightened airport regulation. The situation is further complicated by the fact that the airport is in Virginia, and thus rates do not come under the Public Utilities Commission.

There is no easy answer to the dilemma thus posed. Certainly, however, it should be possible to amend the present contract to remove some of the more rank discriminations without throwing out the arrangement altogether. Private cab operators complain that they are threatened with a fine even if they simply wait while a passenger they have brought to the airport makes a reservation before returning to the city. They also are subject to a penalty if they respond to telephone calls from the airport. Their request to do these types of service is a wholly reasonable one which deserves to be met with more than mere hauteur from the airport management.

"Monty"

Lord Montgomery is a welcome visitor in the Nation's Capital because he was one of the military heroes in the combined war against Nazi tyranny. In addition, his title to a public greeting arises from his present position. He is one of the men whom the peoples of the Atlantic world are relying upon to tie together a defense policy—as chairman of the commanders in chief committee of Western Union, the five-power setup at Fontainebleau which has now become a regional group in the Atlantic defense combination. He said little at the National Press Club yesterday about Western Union beyond denying the reports of hopeless clashes among Western Union leaders. "Monty" is somewhat of a prima donna, and so is his No. 2, General de Lattre de Tassigny, and those who know them both take a dim view about their ability to collaborate. Of course, said Lord Montgomery, there were differences, but he went on to say that those differences were pursued till a compromise had been achieved, and that the compromise was always supported loyally. This assurance, especially when contained in a speech devoted to the need for truth in leadership, must be accepted.

Our distinguished visitor will go down in history as the hero of El Alamein. That battle was one of the decisive battles of history, a turning point in the war on Hitler. The campaign was a triumph of collaboration among the air, sea and land arms. When Montgomery struck, everything had been prepared for the grand desert pursuit of the enemy to the Mareth Line, even to the last button. That is how Montgomery operates. It was this caution in the Montgomery make-up that evoked some criticism of his command in Normandy. But it shouldn't be forgotten that he held the shield while General Bradley conquered the Norman hinterland. A great menace confronted him, for, if the Germans had emptied the Pas de Calais, or robot area, and flung the garrison into the Battle of Caen, the whole invasion would have been imperiled. In the Battle of the Ardennes he led Americans as well as Britons. The armies had been divided by Rundstedt's thrust, and it was decided—by Eisenhower—temporarily to put all the northern forces under Montgomery's command.

Certainly Montgomery is entitled to a place among the great captains of warfare. And the reason is not only because of his military exploits. These are material enough, but outstanding among "Monty's" qualifications is his gift of the leadership that he pleaded for yesterday. He has a genius for instilling confidence and courage in the men under him; the behavior of his "desert rats" attests to that. Discipline among his soldiers was so inherent that he could dispense with the discipline of external trappings upon which many generals rely.

More Highways

If Washington's traffic facilities are to keep abreast of the growing population of the metropolitan area, one obvious need is for more express highways and better use of existing streets. Such a program, in company with more off-street and fringe parking accommodations and faster public transportation, is imperative for cutting down the mounting traffic congestion.

In 1946 two traffic engineering firms completed a survey of short- and long-term needs at the behest of the District Commissioners. The Greiner-De Leuw report, which has been the basis of much of the city's planning, calls for: (1) completion of the K st. highway to the northeast with a connection to the Washington-Baltimore freeway; (2) an underpass at Mount Vernon Square to eliminate the snarl around the public library; (3) a midcity expressway from Independence ave. past the Soldiers' Home to the District line; (4) Capitol Hill expressways along the Mall and east of the Capitol; (5) the Anacostia-Kenilworth freeway to connect with an eventual bridge to Alexandria; (6) the Whitehaven parkway west of Wisconsin ave.; (7) the Arizona ave. freeway northwest from Canal rd.; and (8) expansion of the Rock Creek parkway. It also calls for the designation of more arterial streets favoring through traffic, more grade separations, and a bridge across the Anacostia River at Massachusetts ave.

These suggestions have not been considered from the standpoint of either priority or expense. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which has the responsibility for coordinating all city planning, takes a qualified view of some of the proposals. It believes, and properly, that more expressways without drastic changes downtown might merely increase congestion. It fears, moreover, that too ready access for private cars to and from suburban areas might encourage the movement of population out of the city and thus increase the tax burden on Washington. These are substantial reasons for considering new highways in light of an over-all city plan.

Basically the park and planning commission believes that needs can be met by a less ambitious program. The commission would place more emphasis on arterial streets, traffic channelization and the like. It has given its indorsement to the Kenilworth-Anacostia and the Whitehaven freeways, as well as to the extension of Constitution and Independence aves. eastward. Meanwhile it favors what seems to us an extremely sensible plan of circular routes at increasing radiuses from the downtown sector to distribute traffic and conduct it around the business district. The Fort Drive project would be one of these rings.

A considerable improvement can of course be made at relatively low cost through better use of existing streets. This includes such items as more one-way streets in the downtown area, modernized traffic signals and channelization similar to the project just completed at Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. These can do a great deal to speed traffic and eliminate bottlenecks. Beyond this the problem is to obtain agreement between the planning commission and the highway department on capital improvements.

In the combined judgment of the highway and traffic departments, these projects are "musts" for the near future:

1. A new bridge across the Anacostia River to relieve the strain on the Pennsylvania ave. (Sousa) bridge. This also will help reduce the load at Barney Circle.

2. Grade separation at 15th and H sts. ne. More accidents happen at this intersection than anywhere else in the city.

3. Continuation of K st.

4. The Arizona ave. parkway to relieve Wisconsin ave.

5. Improved routing at Washington, Ward and Logan Circles.

6. A second new 14th st. bridge to replace the old span rapidly wearing out.

Of these the most urgent is the Anacostia bridge because of the tremendous expansion of the Northeast area. Here then is a basic disagreement between the Park and Planning Commission, which favors Massachusetts ave., and the highway department, which wants a bridge at East Capitol st. From the standpoint of esthetics and expense, the planning commission has the better argument, for although a Massachusetts ave. bridge would bisect Gallinger Hospital, it would leave intact the projected sports center along the river. The East Capitol st. bridge would play hob with the proposed stadium area, and it would require costly spans across Kingman Lake as well as the river. However, the point to consider is the need to be served, and in this respect the Capitol st. bridge would be of more help in relieving the strain on the Sousa bridge.

Here, as on other contested points of the timetable, such as Arizona ave., the first essential is for the highway department and the planning commission to get together on their estimates of population and traffic load. Once the two bodies operate from the same fundamental assumptions, agreement should not be difficult. One paramount consideration in dealing with short-term needs is to avoid the sort of "improvement" that merely makes for greater problems later. New highway construction can provide effective relief only as it is synchronized with other aspects of the traffic program.

Mr. Byrnes' Challenge

Former Secretary of State Byrnes is making a bid for a return to public life with some sharp and telling criticism of the Truman Administration. His speeches suggest that he has now definitely made up his mind to run for the governorship of South Carolina against Gov. J. Strom Thurmond next year. They indicate also a growing disquiet among a good many New Dealers over the extremes to which some aspects of President Truman's Fair Deal are being carried.

If we understand Mr. Byrnes' quarrel with the Administration aright, it has its roots in two fundamental issues. One is the tendency to concentrate more and more power in Washington, and the other is the effort to satisfy the public yearning for security out of the public purse without much regard for the cost or where the money is coming from. What Mr. Byrnes had to say to the Southern Governors' Conference at Biloxi, Miss., on the first point was a follow-up to his expression of fears last June that some of the legislative programs under discussion may lead us "down the road to statism."

The necessity for strong Federal powers is beyond question in these days of Nationwide business, industrial and labor organizations. But if the States continue to yield obligations, powers and revenue to the Federal Government, local responsibility may be seriously impaired. And to impair local government is to imperil national government. It is an encouraging sign when a man who has been Secretary of State, Justice of the Supreme Court and "assistant President" during the war is willing to seek State office with the object of reasserting local responsibility. In our opinion, the States are weak today largely because they have shunted their responsibilities into national hands. Let the States reclaim their duties and meet their obligations and the clamor to have new powers centralized in Washington will lose its appeal.

No rehabilitation of local government, however, will remove the necessity for putting our national house in order. Mr. Byrnes criticized the failure of Government to live within its income in this time of "unexampled prosperity." The running of deficits during the depression years is no justification whatever for continuation of the practice now. "If the Government cannot live within its income, Mr. Byrnes pertinently asked, "what will it do should we have a serious recession in business?" The emphasis that Mr. Byrnes put on the need for final sobriety will find a receptive audience in both parties.

No Panama Whitewash

Belatedly the State Department has acknowledged that the bloodless revolution in Panama is not so innocuous as was first made out. In its initial statement on Monday, the department seemed to be patting itself on the back for its part in preventing violence. The statement also seemed to gloss over the awkward implications of the ouster of President Daniel Chanis with the unctuous contention that since the new President acceded by "constitutional" means, no question of recognition was involved. Fortunately for the sake of principle, Assistant Secretary Miller has now issued a vigorous statement "grievously" deploring the upset.

Actually what has happened in Panama is the subversion of civil authority by the military in a pattern altogether too familiar in this hemisphere. The chief of the 2000-man Panamanian police force, Col. Jose Remon, has emerged as the strong man. President Chanis had sought to fire Remon because of the latter's involvement with illegal financial interests. Remon resisted the ouster, ordered out the police to isolate the palace, and forced Dr. Chanis himself to step down. Although Vice President Roberto F. Chiari was sworn in in Chanis' place, present indications are that he too is having difficulty with Remon.

There is, to be sure, some satisfaction in the fact that United States Ambassador Monnett B. Davis and other members of the diplomatic corps persuaded Colonel Remon not to use force. But this cannot hide the other obvious fact that Dr. Chanis resigned under duress. Events in Panama are of particular concern to the United States because of our vital interest in the Panama Canal, and it is important that the State Department should not indulge in pretense and hypocrisy. Nothing could serve our cause worse in Latin America than to become so preoccupied with the facade of constitutional forms that we fail to see the dirty work behind the fence.

"Now This Is My Idea Of A Real Government"

Goldfish Lives Of Officials

By Malvina Lindsay

What Price Privacy

AS THE PUBLIC keeps tab on the honeymoon of Vice President Barkley and his bride, and as Mayor O'Dwyer of New York finds himself feuding with reporters over their checkups on his dating, many genteel Americans deplore such invasions of the personal privacy of officials. And the question rises as to where, under the American system, the line can be drawn between the public and private lives of leaders.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in her recent book This I Remember, tells of the difficulty of rearing children in the aquarium of public life. And there have been recent suggestions (which fortunately got nowhere) that the President have his residence elsewhere than in the White House.

In contrast to all this is the "iron curtain" between personal and private lives of leaders of the Soviet Union—the nation that is our rival in a way of life. Former Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, in My Three Years in Moscow, now running in the New York Times, tells of the deep secrecy maintained about Stalin's personal life, and says even Russians do not know whether he has remarried since the death of his second wife in 1932. Other writers have pointed out how the escapades of his son by his first marriage are unreported in the Soviet press.

NO PUBLIC figure has ever conducted a public courtship, wedding and honeymoon with more poise and grace than Vice President Barkley. Some might say this was because he is an experienced politician. But it was probably more—his deep, sympathetic understanding of people and of Americans in particular. He knows his countrymen well—their curiosity, sentimentality, clubbiness, their habit of identifying themselves with their leaders rather than worshiping them from afar.

Today's gadgets — television, movies, radio, wireless photography — have extended the public's ability to live vicariously the lives of its leaders and heroes. But aggressive public curiosity and press prying are no worse now than in the past. President Cleveland during his honeymoon found reporters using spyglasses to watch him and his bride.

Nor are people any more gossipy about personal affairs of officials. Rachel Jackson's past divorce was a big issue in her husband's campaign of 1828, and the Jackson cabinet tempest over Peggy Eaton was on tongues throughout the country. All White House and near White House weddings from Nellie Custis' down (and divorces as well) have been regarded as public property of the American mind and emotions.

Public personages elsewhere run up against this mass interest in their personal doings. Royalty usually accepts this and lets the public share its big moments so far as possible. (Princess Elizabeth's "I do" was heard on the radio around the world.)

IN THIS country the official who must run for office finds his personal life figuring strongly in the public's reaction to him. "Yet why," a candidate may ask "should my choice of a wife, the behavior of my children, my divorces and romances, if any, my friendships and social habits be dragged into a judgment of my fitness or office? Look at Stalin. Who knows anything about his personal life? And at least we must admit he's good in his line."

However, the line to which the American leader is aspiring is one in which he will represent, not rule. And even though press, radio and public curiosity about the personal affairs of public persons sometimes goes beyond good taste, fair play and even civilized behavior, Americans are bound to feel that they have a vested interest in the whole personality of the man or woman who is to be their proxy.

More and more, science is backing up this feeling. It is revealing, through developments in psychosomatic medicine and other fields, that borders between the physical, mental and emotional life are dissolving. And the public demand is growing that leaders, on whose decisions many people's lives and destinies may hinge, should be free not only of ulcers, but should present good bills of emotional health.

The public knows that a man cannot be Mr. Jones eight hours a day and Mr. Smith the remaining 16. Underneath its surface curiosity about a public leader's personal doings, it senses that these things have a bearing on his general stability and wisdom.

Crommelin's Martyrdom

Like many other nonpartisan bystanders, I could not help but feel sympathy and admiration for Captain Crommelin's spunk when he first injected himself into the Department of Defense controversy as a willing martyr to the Navy's cause.

Later on, however, after Captain Crommelin was reprimanded without court-martial, friends of his passed the word around that the captain was bitterly disappointed because, under court-martial, he would have been permitted to call witnesses in his own behalf which would result in the launching of a new broadside of mudslinging. That left a bad taste in my mouth.

Captain Crommelin's latest attempt to force his reasoning on the American people by requesting that the reprimand he earned be expunged from his official record or that he be court-martialed is the tip-off to me—and I believe many others—that the captain's self-righteous patriotism is tainted not only with the brush of the martyr but with the halo of self-glorification.

Education Vs. Capital

The aid-to-education enthusiasts have had another field day over the astounding revelation that there is still a poorest third of the Nation. "Lack of education for a better-paying education," says the joint committee's staff, "thus appears as an important cause of low income."

Nowhere in the columns of gush on this report might one gain the slightest suspicion that the improvement of living standards is in the slightest way dependent upon the availability of capital in the form of better tools which enable workers to increase their productivity. If it had not been for the capital that built modern American industry, would we not find 90 percent of American families, rather than 30 percent, with current incomes of less than $2000? If capital has gotten us this far, why will it not get us farther? Or shall we instead tax and restrict capital in order to provide an "education" for workers who will then get no better tools to use it on?

The Southern sharecropper is at the bottom of the income heap. What is going to solve his problem? Education, partly. Capital, mostly. The more skilled will man the mechanical cotton pickers, or switch to livestock farming, and raise their income. The rest will go to Memphis or Detroit. And there they will sit until some new capital provides a new job that will give them work at better pay than cotton picking. FUNDAMENTALIST.

"Racial" Beating

Often, as I read some of our better newspapers, I wonder why it is that they, unwittingly no doubt, foster the very evils they wish to fight against.

A case in point is the story of the beating of a Jewish child in Massachusetts which appeared recently in your November 17 issue. Above the picture was the caption, "They called him 'A Jew'" Certainly, the casual reader gets the impression there is something wrong in being called a Jew.

At the side of the picture appears the headline "War-Widow Seeks Answer to Anti-Racial Beating of Son." Indicating the Jews as a "race," therefore separate and different from other white Americans, is a favorite device of professional anti-Semites.

Now, why was the story printed at all? Perhaps, it is natural for the distraught mother to cry out before thinking the matter through. Yet, the only true answer to give her would be to say, "Mrs. Goldstein, your son was not beaten because he was a Jew. He was beaten because the bullies who set upon him as a defenseless victim were tormented by their own emotional insecurity and feelings of inferiority. Such has been the way of bullies from time unrecorded."

All too often, matters which are reported as "racial" incidents are nothing more than ordinary human cussedness, spiked on by feelings of economic and emotional insecurity.

Chest Objections

A lady called on me the other day asking for a contribution to the Community Chest. She is, as I happen to know, so generous of her time and labor on behalf of the Chest, and was so courteous, that, although previously determined to give nothing to the Chest, I paid her two token contributions, one for myself and one for a relative.

But before I shall ever again give anything to the Chest I shall want two things to occur. First, that certain causes not properly included in the Chest organization, such, for instance, as the Boy Scouts, be excluded. Second, some sort of official repudiation of the waste, two or three years ago, of a large sum (I believe $55,000) of Chest money in a "Survey," the chief result of which was a recommendation that segregation be abandoned in Washington, as though the Chest has any business taking sides in so controversial a matter, one wholly outside the field of the Community Chest. Dependents' Case

The well-intentioned plan of the Director of the Budget to eliminate free medical care for dependents of servicemen is a paving stone on the road to the wrong place.

The military life is a complete life; it is a dedicated life. The choice to enter this life is not a simple one; it is not based on comparative levels of salary. The military life contains so high a measure of uncertainty that our society has erected unusually high safeguards against misfortune for those who are now, or who have been, in the military life or dependent upon persons who are in service.

If we must deprive our service personnel of the negative comfort of protection from medical charges, let us at least permit them to make use as before of the excellent medical personnel and facilities of the armed forces, and if money must be saved, charge a flat fee per month, regardless of use of the medical facilities, graded with rank and pay.

Private Flying

In the days since the crash between the Eastern Air Lines DC-4 and the Bolivian P-38 certain members of Congress have made rash and hysterical statements blaming the accident on "private flying."

Private flying is the operation of an aircraft owned by an individual or a corporation by a qualified pilot for pleasure or transportation but not for hire.

The circumstances of the ownership and operation of the P-38 fail to bring its flight on November 1 within the definition of private flying.

It is hardly just or logical to owners of personal aircraft to restrict their use of the larger airports," as Congressmen suggest, because of an accident in which neither aircraft was a personal or private plane.

War A La Mode

We were very much impressed by your article of November 16 on the use of the "brain" to test the B-36-Banshee controversy. It seems to us that this is really a remarkable method of determining the relative performances of our new aircraft. It is truly admirable how the science of mathematics is capable of solving so difficult a problem in so short a time without any necessity of endangering the lives of Navy or Army personnel.

It so happens that we have today attended a lecture at a scientific institution where the extraordinary possibilities of the new Harvard "brain" were reported by an outstanding mathematician. The expected accomplishments of the Aberdeen "brain" already described in your paper are opening great possibilities for the future use of the Harvard or of still more perfect computing machines.

Since it is possible with one brain to solve the B-36-Banshee controversy, would it not be possible to solve more important controversies with a number of highly perfected high speed calculators? Would it not be possible, for instance, to solve controversies involving more than two airplanes by feeding to the mechanical brain the speeds, altitudes, rate of climb, warning time, weather, ability to direct fire power, etc., of a great number of airplanes?

We see already for the near future, rows of high speed computing machines with a multitude of specialized mathematicians solving the controversy between two enemy armies without any danger to the lives of the soldiers. In a short time the scientists will prepare a report and conclude who are the victors and the vanquished.

As a matter of fact, we recommend that the United Nations set up a War Strategy Evaluation Group (WSEG) equipped with a large number of high speed electronic sequence calculators, staffed with highly trained technical personnel including mathematicians, war strategists, ordnance experts, nuclear scientists, cybernaticians, logisticians, etc., charged with the responsibility of adjudicating all wars immediately upon declaration.

The personnel of WSEG will be elected by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). The WSEG will be directly responsible to the Security Council of the United Nations. As soon as a war is declared the belligerent nations shall submit to WSEG, via their U. N. representative, a complete and comprehensive statement of all military equipment, combat personnel, industrial statistics, economic indices, fifth-column potentialities and any additional pertinent information such as the extent of any interservice controversies, etc. WSEG will immediately proceed to calculate by means of the high-speed automatic electronic sequence calculators the ultimate outcome of the war. The result will be relayed to the Security Council, who will be responsible for negotiating the treaty of peace in accordance with the findings of WSEG.

This, we believe, is the only means of saving the world from complete destruction which is otherwise inevitable. Oh, goodness! We forgot the veto power.

Soldiers' Home

"Soldiers' Home Grounds May Be VA Hospital Site." Plan to take over entire reservation is being studied. This is the heading on a November 20 story in another Washington paper.

The precedent is suggested of taking over a trust given to Congress for protecting an investment paid for by the Regular Army soldier. The professional soldier donated out of his Army pay for many years so that he might have a home of his own to retire in, conducted along traditional Army lines.

The land for the home was donated with the proviso that if any other activity besides that of the Army took over the donation would be automatically canceled and the land would revert to the heirs.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

A Magic Word

SINCE Secretary of State Dean Acheson and ECA Chief Paul Hoffman returned from their respective trips to Europe, it has become increasingly clear that American policy in Europe revolves about one magic word. This word is "integration." And it is about time to inquire what this word really means to Acheson, Hoffman, and the other American policy-makers.

A groper through the fog which more and more obscures American foreign policy soon discovers that "integration" is the wrong word. To integrate, according to the dictionary, means "to unite or become united so as to form a more complete or perfect whole," which would suggest that this country is trying to create a United States of Europe overnight.

In fact, what Acheson and Hoffman are trying to promote is nothing of the sort. The real objective, as one of the authors of the integration project put it, is "to get back to 1910 by 1952." What the United States wants is a Europe whose internal trading relationships are as close as possible to those which existed before the First World War.

In brief, it is now the major aim of American policy in Europe to eliminate currency controls and export and import restrictions. Ultimately what is wanted is a real economic union, with tariffs eliminated and a central banking system and a common currency created. But all concerned agree that for the foreseeable future this real "integration" is no more than a distant dream.

THIS apparently rather modest but in fact enormously difficult project for turning the clock back to happier days is envisaged as taking place in a series of stages. In the first stage, there would be three separate groups of "integrated" states—France and Italy, Belgium, Holland, and Luxembourg, and the three Scandinavian countries. The first five countries would then be joined, to form "Fritalux." The Scandinavians would then probably be brought into Fritalux. And, finally, Western Germany would be added, to make one big, relatively free trading area in western Europe.

Britain (to the great relief of the British leaders) is not being pressed to become an active participant in this Acheson-Hoffman project. But while they were in Europe, Acheson and Hoffman politely but firmly urged British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps to give the scheme "encouragement and support." Bevin and Cripps rather reluctantly agreed. The chief British contribution is expected to be firm military and political commitments to France, to balance French fears of a revived Germany.

Since this project now clearly has first priority in American foreign policy, it is deeply important to ask not only what it is expected to accomplish, but also what it is not expected to accomplish. Its authors believe that in the long run—the very long run—"integration" will strengthen the economies of western Europe and make the Continent less dependent on the United States. A more immediately important political objective is to tie the rapidly reviving Western German economy firmly into that of the Continent, and thus prevent Germany from turning again against the West.

THESE are highly commendable aims. But it is necessary to examine the other side of the coin. In Europe, two facts stand out like large, sore, sinister thumbs. The first is the imminent threat of British financial collapse, which has by no means been removed by devaluation of the pound, and which would surely be followed by a general economic collapse all over the Continent.

The authors of the integration project agree that even if the scheme were wholeheartedly accepted and put into operation immediately, no appreciable economic benefits would accrue for a number of years. Thus the project will not deal with a situation which threatens to knock the underpinnings right out from under American foreign policy.

The second fact which stands out in Europe is that western Europe is still virtually defenseless in the face of the Soviet Union's massive rearmament effort. Again, the integration project will not affect the real balance of military power, which is rapidly swinging in favor of the Soviet Union.

In one of Chekov's minor short stories there appears the character of a Russian landowner who planned vast improvements on his property, while the roof of his house was falling about his head. Free trade on the Continent, leading ultimately to a real continental economic and political union, would certainly be a vast improvement and a thoroughly worthy ultimate aim of American policy. But there is a perfectly obvious danger that "integration" will be accepted as a magical and marvelously inexpensive substitute for a real policy capable of preventing the noncommunist world from caving in, like the Russian landowner's roof.

French Fears

By Marquis Childs

German Revival, Pyrenees Strategy

PARIS.—Before the present "government" of Premier George Bidault was formed, France was 19 days without a government.

Childs

Most Frenchmen appear to have accepted this state of comfortable anarchy with a philosophic shrug. After all, they say, has not France always been an individualistic nation, resentful of the powers exercised by the judge and the tax collector?

How long the present feeble patchwork of a government will last is anyone's guess. It may fall tomorrow. Or it may last until after the Christmas holidays.

As Bidault, who is typically French, said himself at a recent luncheon, he just happened to walk into the office of President Vincent Auriol when the search for a compromise Premier had reached a desperate stage. Any one of 42 million Frenchmen might have walked in at that moment and found himself tapped for the job.

But despite the philosophy of the French individualist, there is tragedy in the fact that this country has produced no political leadership since the end of the war. Nor does it seem likely to produce any. Even the myth-shrouded figure of Gen. Charles de Gaulle is receding into the distance with only a claque of right-wing Socialists to keep the hero-worship going.

Beneath the bustling surface of recovery, which is truly impressive, are deep-seated fears that oppress all the politicians. These underlying fears may partly explain the paralysis of political life today.

ONE OF these fears is the old, obsessive preoccupation with German power. As that power revives in spite of the devastation of war, French nervousness also revives.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, almost the only man in the government with any strength or integrity, was partly persuaded at the recent meeting with Acheson and Bevin that western Germany should be brought into the European community. The three Allied high commissioners in Germany were given some bargaining power with the Adenauer regime in Bonn to scale down the present program of dismantling German industry.

But Schuman was only partly and reluctantly persuaded. One reason for his reluctance was the fear that the Socialists, who are still under the tutelage of Leon Blum, might pull out of the government that agreed to full German accord.

The fear of Germany is directly related to the worsening relations with Britain. Back of the strife over whether Britain does or does not intend to collaborate in integrating Europe's economy is a deep suspicion of British strategy in the event of another war. The belief is that the pattern of 1940 would be repeated, with British troops evacuating the continent before the invaders to make a real stand in Britain proper.

MANY OF the French I have talked with express the fervent hope that America will take a stronger line to bring the French and British together. This can only be done, they say, by direct participation of America in both the economic and military councils of Europe. The time has passed, they argue, when America can be a benevolent bystander handing out money.

But America itself is the source of still another French fear. That fear is inspired by Generalissimo Franco's private lobbyists, congressional and otherwise, who repeatedly urge in public that Spain be brought into the economic and military pacts.

The French suspect that back of this urging is another strategic concept that they consider fatal in its consequences. That is to retire behind the line of the Pyrenees Mountains and defend a foothold in the Iberian Peninsula while preparing to retake the rest of the continent. The French are convinced that after prolonged Russian occupation there would be nothing worth retaking.

If the impulse comes from Europe itself, as seems likely, then Spain can be brought into some degree of cooperation, but irresponsible statements by junketeers from America have done great harm.

The announcement that Russia set off an atomic explosion gave a new impetus to current fears. While comparatively little has been said about it publicly, the effect has been profound. Even the members of the French Communist Party are reported to have said privately that they feared the consequences of Russia having achieved atomic success.

Whether America could by asserting her leadership more positively and vigorously resolve many of these doubts and fears, a passing visitor can hardly say. But one thing is obvious. That is that the time for taking decisive action is passing and the opportunity may not occur again under anything like the present circumstances.

15 Southern Governors Back States Rights, Free Enterprise

Biloxi, Miss., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Fifteen Southern Governors ended a planning conference today by voting to give their "unqualified support" to the principles of States' rights and free enterprise.

The conference elected Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, 1948 States Rights presidential candidate, as its next chairman.

Leander H. Perez of Louisiana, director of the States Rights movement, termed this a fitting recognition of Thurmond's campaign against the Truman civil rights program.

Perez indicated his choice for 1952 chairman would be former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, now a likely candidate for South Carolina Governor, who indicted "big government" in a speech before the conference last night.

Besides indorsing States Rights, the Governors passed resolutions condemning "Government regimentation of the individual or socialization of competitive industry."

The Governors also protested the frequent refusal of Northern and Western Governors to extradite escaped prisoners to Southern States on grounds that they would be subjected to "cruel and unusual treatment."

They said Governors who refuse extraditions violate the "full faith and credit" clause of the Constitution and "tend to create a haven for criminals."

The conference formally asked the Council of State Governments to "make a thorough study of this problem with a view to the creation of means and methods for ending such disregard of constitutional authority."

By another resolution the Governors protested the Federal Government's claim to ownership of submerged oil lands off the coasts of Louisiana and Texas.

New Transit Fare Boost Looms; Rising Costs Cited

fare raises as a "realistic approach" to the problem.

Capital Transit's most recent fare increase went into effect October 31, 1948, boosting cash rates from 10 to 13 cents, the weekly pass from $1.50 to $1.75 and reinstituting the sale of tokens at 3 for 35 cents.

In computing possible fare increases, Heberle said he counted on a 4-percent drop in passenger income—in addition to the continuing passenger decline—as a direct result of the rate hike.

Heberle said the sale of four tokens for 50 cents, although essentially the same rate as two tokens for 25 cents, would result in fewer sales of tokens and more of cash fares since patrons are reluctant to tie up the larger amount for the saving.

Filing the company's 145th exhibit in the 15-day arbitration case, Heberle estimated the cost of all the requests by the company's union employes would add $4,582,000 to operating costs. He said the 25 cents an hour across-the-board wage boost asked would mean $2,775,000 more alone.

Heberle will return to the stand today at 9:30 a. m. for cross-examination by Eli Oliver, counsel for the company's union employes. After today's session, during which company testimony is expected to be completed, the arbitration will adjourn to Tuesday morning when final arguments will be heard.

15 Rail Lines Will Abandon Ride-Now-Pay-Later Scheme

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—Fifteen rail lines, including the New York Central and the Pennsylvania, pulled out of the Rail Travel Credit Agency today.

Fourteen of the lines withdrawing from the "charge it" ticket system were in the East. The Union Pacific also withdrew. The lines will no longer offer passengers the ride-now-pay-later service after January 1.

A spokesman at the agency, a mutual undertaking of 47 railroads, said the Eastern lines "found out that they just had to whittle down costs. The price per transaction, they felt, was too high."

A large group of major railroads of the West remains in the agency, founded April 1, 1947.

The agency spokesman listed the following roads as those which will withdraw: Baltimore & Ohio; Boston & Albany; Central Vermont; Chesapeake & Ohio; Monon; Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific; Erie; Canadian National (Grand Trunk); New York Central; Nickel Plate; Norfolk & Western; Pennsylvania; Pennsylvania - Reading Seashore Lines; Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, and the Union Pacific.

A large group of Western roads among them the Santa Fe, Burlington, Illinois Central, Milwaukee Road, Chicago & North Western, Great Northern, Rock Island, and the Western Pacific, remain in the ticket scheme, the spokesman said.

Auto Dealers Told to Avoid Easy Credit

By S. Oliver Goodman

A credit leader yesterday warned auto dealers against offering the public excessive and unsound time-payment terms.

A. G. Rude

"Little or nothing down and forever to pay" is a selling plan which promises serious difficulties for both the dealer and customer in the long run, according to Alan G. Rude, vice president in charge of sales of Universal C. I. T. Corp., the Nation's largest independent auto finance company.

Addressing the Automobile Dealers Association of West Virginia at its convention in the Greenbrier Hotel at White Sulphur Springs, Rude added:

"If terms on new cars make it possible for a customer to purchase a new automobile for less down and less per month than he would have to pay on a used car, what is going to happen to your used car market? Unless this trend toward unsound and unnecessary terms is curbed, you can expect Government regulation back on a basis that you definitely will not like."

RFC Sets Postwar Precedent In Backing Kaiser-Frazer

By J. A. Livingston

SO FAR, Henry J. Kaiser has been a pretty good financial risk. True, he still owes the Government 185 million dollars. But he has managed to pay the Government 71 million in principal, $23,600,000 in interest and $17,600,000 in rentals, a total of $112,200,000.

Kaiser has now cut a new furrow in Government borrowing. Most of his earlier loans were associated with the war. He built the Fontana steel plant on funds borrowed from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. He bought an aluminum plant and the Willow Run auto plant from the Surplus War Plants Corp. But this time, Kaiser has managed to get 44 million dollars in RFC aid in a strictly peacetime venture—to keep the 50 million-dollar-Kaiser-Frazer Corp. going.

Livingston

From Kaiser's standpoint, the problem was clear. In February, 1948, Kaiser-Frazer offered through Otis & Co. 1,500,000 shares of common stock at $13 a share. The sale fizzled and Otis walked out of the deal. That hurt Kaiser-Frazer's capacity to raise new money. Others bankers wouldn't make a long-term loan. And the company couldn't go on trying to sell a single model, four-door car. It had to retool, restyle, or give up. It went to the RFC. Now Kaiser promises a low-priced car.

Harvey J. Gunderson, a director of the RFC, told a Senate subcommittee he had no doubt the 44-million-dollar loan would be repaid. He felt it might be refinanced, by sale of securities to the public inside a year. That, of course, would depend on how the new car goes over.

GUNDERSON said the RFC lent the money to prevent the disemployment of 11,000 workers at the Government-built Willow Run Plant, and the dislocation of perhaps 37,000 workers at plants of Kaiser-Frazer suppliers.

Thus the RFC has changed radically in purpose since its founding during the depression. It started off as an emergency lending corporation. It made loans to banks and to railroads to be sure that the essential services of the Nation were not disrupted for want of funds. Later, loans were made to industrial corporations, too—if a company's financial failure would aggravate the depression or might wreck an entire community.

The Kaiser-Frazer loan hardly comes under that classification. The U. S. is not suffering from unemployment or deflation. Nor would a financially embarrassed Kaiser-Frazer Corp. cause an industrial crisis, widespread unemployment, or the loss of essential production. The automobile industry has plenty of capacity to produce high- and low-priced cars with or without Kaiser-Frazer. If the workers were let out at Kaiser-Frazer, some presumably could find jobs at other plants.

THE REAL effect of the loan is to extend the area of Government lending operations. It keeps a new competitor in the automobile business. For this, there's hardly precedent, although the Tennessee Valley Authority provides power at yardstick rates in the South; and President Truman proposed a Government-financed steel plant in his state of the Union message. So, the argument for Government aid to foster competition could well run like this:

Nowadays it takes 50 to 100 millions to get started in a major industry like automobiles or steel or basic machinery. Kaiser-Frazer raised 54 million dollars and it wasn't enough. Private capital is available in such quantities only to powerfully entrenched enterprises like General Motors, Standard Oil (N. J.), and so on. Therefore, the Government must step in to help newcomers, if newcomers are ever to get a foothold in the country's major industries.

Lending for such a purpose invites abuse. Persons who make the most noise politically, rather than persons who show the most skill industrially, are likely to get funds. And, ultimately, the Government will be forced into business. If advances are not paid off, the Government will take over properties.

Thus, it seems worth while, when Congress convenes, to have a full-dress examination of Government lending: What kind of loans should be made? To whom? Under what circumstances? And where are they leading? Kaiser has performed a political service by bringing RFC lending policies out into the open—and into question.

Jury to Get Lewis Gaming Case Today

key figures, Bernice Franklin and Downey Rice.

Bernice is the red-haired former girl friend of one of the indicted gamblers. Her information to authorities touched off the Lewis raid. Rice is a former FBI agency and special consultant to U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay during the antigambling crusade.

Signed Affidavit

Miss Franklin signed the affidavit on the basis of which the search and arrest warrants for the Lewis raid were issued. Rice was one of the raiders.

The defense presented only one witness, Deputy U. S. Marshal Donald H. Foster, in an effort to discredit the testimony of Assistant U. S. Attorney John W. Fihelly. Fihelly had testified that five of the defendants had admitted to him on the night of the raid that they were gamblers.

Fihelly testified that a defendant, Dean Kennedy, 2100 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md., "told me he had worked in the numbers business for 8 months and that he also did some horse betting and bookmaking, and that he turned in part of his play to Lewis personally."

Foster testified yesterday that he had been handcuffed to Kennedy during the time Fihelly was asking questions. Foster said that Kennedy had never told Fihelly about being in the numbers business. In fact, Foster testified, Kennedy told Fihelly "I don't fool with the numbers."

Took No Notes

Under cross-examination by Assistant Prosecutor Edward L. Carey, Foster testified that Fihelly was taking notes throughout the conversation and that he had taken no notes.

For two hours in court and for one hour in Judge McGuire's chambers, defense lawyers tried to keep the case from going to the jury.

On behalf of Lewis, William H. Collins asked Judge McGuire for a directed verdict of not guilty, on the grounds that, if the Government had proved anything, they had proved that the lottery law was violated in Maryland but not in the District. His motion was denied.

Myron G. Ehrlich and Charles E. Ford, counsel for all the dedendants except Lewis moved for a directed verdict of not guilty for their clients. This was also denied.

Ehrlich asked sppecifically for a direct verdict of not guilty for two defendants, Bernard J. Del-Negro, 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw., and Gregory Seger, 2801 22d pl. se. The only evidence against them, Ehrlich said, was that they were in the air-conditioned, sound-proofed gambling room when the raid occurred. Judge McGuire also denied this motion.

During arguments on these motions, Judge McGuire spoke sharply to both Prosecutor William Hitz and Ehrlich.

"I don't understand your difficulty during the last two days, Mr. Hitz," he said, "and I don't want you to get captious with me." He had criticized Hitz during a bench conference Monday for not informing the court of his plans.

Judge McGuire also instructed Ehrlich "for the last time" to refrain from arguing about the legality of the search and arrest warrants carried by United States marshals on the Lewis raid.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—Grains were strong today on export reports. December corn led the upward movement, advancing more than 2 cents a bushel to $1.28¼, a new high since February. Other corn contracts hit new seasonal peaks.

Persistent demand for corn continued to meet scant offerings from the country. Only 60 cars arrived here, and 15 of these were owned by the Government. This time a year ago, arrivals ran from 350 to 450 or more cars daily.

Wheat closed ⅛ to 1¼ cent higher, corn up ⅝ to 2¼ cents, oats unchanged to ⅜ cent lower, rye down 1 to 1½ cent, soybeans ¼ to 1¼ cent higher, and lard 5 cents a hundred pounds lower to 2 cents higher.

One on the Aisle—

'The King's Men' A Rossen Triumph

By Richard L. Coe

HOW POWER CAN corrupt and ambition destroy is the theme of a vibrant, tumultuous film at the Playhouse, "All the King's Men." Don't miss it.

This is a fine picture on several levels of movie-making. It has the sort of excitement to interest the most escapist-minded of picturegoers. It has the sharp delineations of characters that fascinate those whose hobby is people. And it is an immensely provocative political document.

"All the King's Men" is adapted, produced and directed by Robert Rossen from Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize novel. When this and "A Lion in the Streets" appeared three years ago, it was evident that both novels were considering the fantastic career of Huey Long. While the parallels remain in the movie, Rossen has been quoted as stating that he was not concerned with the late Louisiana Senator, that he was simply picturing a political figure and the public's acceptance of him.

This he has done in sternly realistic detail, showing how a man's lust for power was born, how cynicism replaced idealism and how ambition perverted his dreams to nightmares.

We first see Willie Stark running for office in a backward county. His wife, a schoolteacher older than he, pushes him through law training. Needing a scapegoat to split the vote, the State politicos get Willie to run for Governor, a trick he recognizes midway in the campaign. Though he spills the beans, he doesn't win, but he does learn how to win. The next time the results sweep him into office.

The friends and bargains he's made quickly overtake him and he's trapped in the moral paradox of our day. Means, we find, cannot justify the end.

His strong-arm methods destroy his son's life. His belief in the fundamental evil of man propels him into digging up the unsavory in the life of any who oppose him. Closely associated with one of the State's leading political families, his contact with it shatters them and eventually leads to his own violent death.

To depict all this, the film rushes along, including a number and variety of characters and incidents which in a movie is virtually reckless, but by the very force of events and interweaving of characters, the skein is tightly drawn. Although not all the events and figures of the novel can be included, the flavor is intact, no small triumph considering the necessary contractions.

Certainly one reason the picture is so effective is that one man has had his hand on the picture from adaptation and production to the directing, Robert Rossen. Because he has known exactly what he intended to convey in his script, his direction of each scene is smashingly clear.

The casting could hardly have been more effective.

Broderick Crawford, whom you'll probably recall from "Of Mice and Men," makes a vigorous, pathetic figure of Stark, forming his diabolical concept of all men as evil and winding up, crumpled with an assassin's bullet in his chest, clinging to this notion that has been a classic theme since man first began to tell stories.

Miss McCambridge Scores

Because her role is crisp, out of the usual rut and bitingly written, Mercedes McCambridge makes the most exciting major role debut of the year. Her scenes lashing at Willie the hick or staring at her pock-marked face in a mirror are memorable make-believe, brilliantly played and directed.

The narrator and observer through whose eyes we see the rise and fall of Willie Stark is a newspaper reporter, well played by John Ireland, whose cinema rise has been rapid. While the plot involves him in romance it's shrewdly subdued and he plays the role naturally and well.

Matter of fact, the entire cast is splendid, especially in such minor but atmospheric roles as Katharine Warren's highball-addicted lady, H. C. Miller's muted delineation of Stark's father and Anne Seymour's quiet distress as the Governor's wife.

But without Rossen's shrewd adaptation and direction, these capable players wouldn't have been half so effective. "All the King's Men," with its ability to say so much to so many, owes its excellence as a movie largely to Writer-Director Rossen.

"ALL THE KING'S MEN." Columbia release produced, written and directed by Robert Rossen from Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize novel. Photographed by Burnett Guffey. Music by Louis Gruenberg. At the Playhouse.

Knicks Trounce Caps, 89-74, Close In on 2d Place

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE TOUCHDOWN CLUB honored a couple of comers, Connie Mack and Clark Griffith, yesterday, and a houseful of members and guests romped at the eightieth birthday party of the Nats' president. Boys will be boys, however, and Connie and Griff told different stories.

"I consider Mr. Griffith our country's greatest baseball man," said 87-year-old Connie Mack.

POVICH

"Don't believe Connie Mack," said Griffith at his turn on the dais. "When I look at him, I am looking at Mr. Baseball."

Griffith was fondling one telegram from among the heap of congratulatory messages. He read it: "Four score need hold no terrors for you who holds the secret of perpetual youth. My best wishes to you always. Harry Truman."

"I'm proud of that message," said Griffith, "and I know it's meant for Connie Mack, too. You know of the wise men's saying 'You grow old too soon and wise too late.' Well, that doesn't apply to Connie or me. Don't forget we both had our finest success when we neared 60."

The big party sang "Happy Birthday" to Griff, and the Touchdown Club was probably setting some kind of a record, anyway. It was taking status as probably the only organization ever to toss a party to an eighth-place club owner.

ACROSS TOWN at the Redskin offices, another ceremony was taking place. They were calling a press conference to announce that Sammy Baugh was signing to play for the Redskins next season. That has been happening for 14 seasons now, and doesn't quite come under the heading of a startling news development.

It was a reminder, though, that the signing of Baugh back in 1937 was the luckiest thing that ever happened to the Redskins. They picked him up for a mere $5000 salary and he took 'em to the championship in their maiden year in Washington. It was Baugh, more than any other man, who transformed the city from an indifferent football town into a frenzy that lasted 10 years.

Those were the days of Ray Flaherty, before the succession of junior grade coaches George Marshall hired. Flaherty's dressing room speech on the night of Baugh's debut is unforgettable. He assembled the Redskins, told 'em bluntly: "Up in Boston you were crying that we didn't give you a passer. Now's we have Sammy Baugh, the best in the world, I want plenty of protection for him tonight. The Giants will be out to get him. Don't let that happen. Get them first."

COLLEGE PRESIDENTS, some of them, may look dimly on the so-called over-emphasis on football with its highly press-agented stars, but in at least one case it's difficult to fault an All-American. Ever hear of the Charlie Justice Scholarship Fund?

That's what is happening down in North Carolina in tribute to the football exploits of Justice, his character and sportsmanship. More than 500 persons already have contributed to the Fund which will finance scholarships for high school graduates.

Some of the contributions are in the form of checks for $100 and $50, but most of them are in the $5-to-$25 class, offered voluntarily by admirers of North Carolina's 165-pound back in appreciation of "the splendid example he has set for the youth of the Nation." Since the appeal was launched a week ago by the Duke alumni chapter of Durham, contributions have been received at the rate of 70 per day.

OUT AT MINNESOTA, where Frank McCormick has resigned as athletic director, Head Coach Bernie Bierman says that he is "not interested" in stepping up to the vacant post, despite the promotion it holds.

And despite Bierman's professed lack of interest, it still could happen, according to knowing sources at the university. Easily recalled is the dissatisfaction with Bierman's team at the start of the season when the "Good Bye Bernie" signs were hung out in the student cheering section, the same sort of prelude to Harry Stuhldreher's ouster at Wisconsin. Studldreher wound up as athletic director.

Dignifying the report that there will be a new coach at Minnesota is the "availability" of Bud Wilkinson for the job. Wilkinson, now the highly successful coach at unbeaten Oklahoma, is a Minnesota alumnum, and last year confided to friends that he'd like to move up to his old school.

Midway during the football season when Elmer Sitko was averaging 6 yards at a clip for Notre Dame, some wag labeled him "6-Yard Sitko." The fellow now is worried about 21/1000ths of a yard. Because in 97 carries with the ball, the red-headed fullback of the Irish is averaging only 5.979 yards, and letting his admirer down.

Griffith, Mack Honored Here

An overflow crowd of 300 enthusiastic Touchdown Club members and guests gave 80-year-old Clark C. Griffith and 87-year-old Connie Mack standing ovations yesterday at Griffiths annual birthday luncheon.

"Clark Griffith has done more for baseball than any other man," Mack told the gathering. "His work during the war, his untiring efforts at all times and his loyal service to this great game make him outstanding."

Griffith expressed sincere appreciation over Connie's presence, and praised him as "one of the great managers of all time."

"Mack and I are the only men who helped organize the American League who are still on the job," Griffith said. "And I hope that Connie Mack, God bless him, is in there for many years to come."

The Washington Baseball Club presented Mack with a scorecard kept by a local fan the day Connie broke in as a catcher with Washington in 1887.

"You got two hits that day, so you must have been good," Griffith said to his old friend.

Congressional Club Reelects Williams

Wash B. Williams, prominent civic leader and sportsman, yesterday was reelected president of Congressional Country Club at the annual meeting. This will mark the third term for Williams.

Congressional also named Herbert A. Mihills as vice president; J. Mark Trice, secretary, and Ray G. Lochiel as treasurer. Trice was also reelected to the board of governors. Also named to the board were Edmund O. Carl, Col. Eugene P. Kavanaugh, J. Mason [illegible] William O. Woolley.

Santa Clara Named for Orange Bowl

Miami, Fla., Nov. 22 (AP).—The University of Santa Clara football team, twice beaten and once tied, was named today to play in the Miami Orange Bowl January 2.

Santa Clara will be the first California team ever to play in the Orange Bowl, and it will be the coast eleven's third appearance in a major bowl. Santa Clara defeated Louisiana State, 31-14, in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans on January 1, 1937, and repeated the next year against the same team in the same bowl, 6-0.

Van C. Kussrow, chairman of the Orange Bowl schedule committee, made the announcement after catching the team by telephone at Santa Barbara, Calif., they were en route home for a game with Oklahoma.

"It's definite," said Kussrow. "The president of the university, the Rev. Williac C. Gianera, and Coach Len Casanova, both agreed to come to Miami for our big game."

Kentucky, Then Maryland

Choice of the Pacific Coast team's opponent hinged on the outcome of several games this weekend. A possibility existed that the New Year game might be a California vs. Florida affair.

Naturally partisan Miami sports editors said that if the University of Miami beat strong Kentucky Friday night the Hurricanes might stand a chance of getting a bid. Miami also must dispose of Maryland here December 2.

Tulane was well liked generally, but was thought to be a good Sugar Bowl prospect. Other teams mentioned were Kentucky—if they win Friday—Tennessee, and the loser of the Rice-Baylor game Saturday. The winner of that game will go to the Cotton Bowl.

Orange Pays $75,000

Another consideration was money. Miami can offer only $75,000 to a bowl team, while both the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans and the Cotton Bowl in Dallas offer $20,000 to $30,000 more.

Santa Clara was chosen quickly by the Orange Bowl committee after Kussrow himself reported on the Santa Clara-Oklahoma game, which he scouted Saturday.

Undefeated Oklahoma won that one, 28-21. Santa Clara's only other defeat was by California, the Pacific Coast champions, 21-7. The Broncos tied Stanford, 7-7.

On the victory side, Santa Clara defeated San Jose, 14-13; Fresno State, 53-0; Portland, 26-13; UCLA, 14-0; Loyola, 27-19; San Francisco, 13-7, and St. Mary's, 19-6.

Pat Thomas Wins by TKO

Pat Thomas gained revenge by winning a technical knockout over Walter Hamm at 1:26 in the sixth round of the featured eight-rounder at Turner's Arena last night.

Thomas, 133, of Washington lost a four-rounder to Hamm, 130, of Washington a week ago.

Only 453, smallest local fight crowd of the year saw the four eight-rounders last night. Thomas won the first five rounds, slicing open Hamm's eye in the fifth. Hamm was reeling around the ring in the sixth when the bout was stopped. There were no knockdowns although Thomas tripped up Hamm three times.

Billy Patterson, 149½, of New York, outpointed Mel Bartholomew, 147, New Orleans, in the first eight-rounder. Each fighter scored a knockdown, but the decision was unanimous.

Leon Daughtry, 145, former D. C. Golden Gloves champion, was clearly outpointed by Bobby Dawson, 149, New York. Dawson slashed open old cuts over both of Daughtry's eyes.

Roland Randall, 164, of Washington, won a technical knockout over Johnny Holt, 162½, also of D. C., in 1:41 of the sixth round. A hard right in the first round flattened Holt's nose and it bled profusely until Referee Eddie La Fond stopped the one-sided bout. There were no knockdowns.

Gross gate was $846.85, and net $630.95.

Baugh Signs For 14th Season With Redskins

"I get tired of workin' on my ranch!"

That was the reason a grinning Sammy Baugh gave for continuing in professional football yesterday as he signed for his fourteenth season with the Redskins.

The 35-year-old passing master, greatest Washington athlete since Walter Johnson, thus indicated a desire to become the National Football League player with the most active years. After 1950 he will be tied for second place with Mel Hein, New York Giant center, a year short of the record 15 put in by Johnny Blood of Green Bay and Pittsburgh between 1925 and 1939.

Red Smith Resigns As Furman Coach

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

Williamson Picks Terps, North Carolina

By Paul B. Williamson

This is the week when turkeys and football forecasters put their heads on the block.

Thursday, bowl-ambitious Maryland should prevail over West Virginia at College Park. Howard is the choice over Lincoln in their game at Philadelphia's Temple Stadium.

In the South, the oldest classic of the week is Virginia at North Carolina. Although Virginia has a higher rating, the system goes against its figures and picks the Tar Heels.

Explanation — Team in first (left) column is picked by the Williamson System as the winner. It is the HOME team unless its opponent in second (right) column is starred. "n" means night

Leo's Given Good Reason

College Scouts Will Watch Wilson's Speros In Friday's Title Battle With McKinley

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE presence of brawny Leo Speros in Woodrow Wilson's lineup has suddenly mushroomed interest in Friday night's interhigh championship game beyond the borders of Washington.

It's supposed to be hush hush, but Coaches Carl Snavely of North Carolina and Harvey Harman of Rutgers have evinced special interest in the 18-year-old senior by assigning agents to scout the lad's performance against McKinley Tech at Griffith Stadium in the Division 1-9 title game.

Their attention is warranted.

Leo's record stamps him as one of the greatest fullbacks in interhigh history, and he has all the physical requisites to someday become an outstanding college player.

Still growing, Leo packs a solid 195 pounds on a 6-foot 1-inch frame. He's as speedy as a scatback, and when he's cornered, he runs over his foes like a Bronko Nagurski.

He has scored 10 touchdowns in nine games, and has been on the passing end of 7 other touchdown plays. He can punt, and Coach Joe Carlo calls him one of the best blockers and tacklers on his Wilson team.

He's exploded for long scoring runs in almost every game. Against Chamberlain he ran 61 yards, against Roosevelt 43, against Eastern 36 and 59 and against St. John's 76.

Anacostia, Wilson's leading rival in the race of the Southern Division title, sent eight men into the line in an effort to stop the rushes of powerful Leo.

So Leo, cagily stepped back and fired three touchdown passes as Wilson romped 40-7. Leo holds the ball down near the end and cuts loose with a fast and accurate spiral.

He has some good targets to shoot at. End Pete Haley has grabbed three of his touchdown tosses for 25, 14 and 9 yards. Halfback Lee Brinson caught two on plays of 45 and 50 yards. Dick Sebastian, another halfback, took one for 19 yards. And even Blocking Back Tom Sandoz toted one on a 33-yard play.

Leo is a busy boy all year around. When football season is over, he'll step in as the top scorer on the Green Tiger basketball team. And when spring appears, he'll take over third base on the baseball team. He has a strong throwing arm and bats around .340.

This Is Way to Do It

Wege Family, 14 Strong, Will Take in Tech-Wilson Game

Theodore Wege, his family and friends are going to have a big party Friday night, and it's all on Mr. Wege.

They're going to start out at 6 p. m. with turkey dinner at the Weges', 1617 H st. se., and then they're going out to Griffith Stadium to see Wilson play McKinley Tech for the Interhigh football championship (Divisions 1 to 9).

Mr. Wege made sure that his crowd will have good seats by buying 14 tickets yesterday at the McKinley bank.

Team Match On Tonight's Show

Headlining tonight's mat show at Joe Turner's Arena will be a two-man team match with Natie Brown and Ivan Kamaroff meeting Laverne Baxter and Irish Jack Kelly.

Marvin Mercer, local mat favorite, takes on Chief Yaque; Monsieur Paris faces George Marcricostas and Henri Piers meets Jesse James in other matches. First bout is at 8:45.

An employe of H. P. Foley Electrical Co., he has several reasons for going all out for the game:

"The money goes for a good cause," he says, "to purchasebadly needed athletic equipment for the 10 Interhigh schools.

"I've seen eight Interhigh games this season, and those kids have more enthusiasm and play a more spectacular game than the colleges or pros.

"And I'm a Tech rooter because my son, John, is a halfback on the team."

Going to the game with Mr. Wege are: his daughter, Ann, 11; his brother George, his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Blaine, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Blaine, Paul Blaine and Ben Blaine, and friends from Colonial Beach, Va., Charles Thomas and daughter Beverley, 14. The three tickets he has left will be saved for any friends who might drop by the house at the last minute.

NOTES—There will be pep rallies at every Interhigh school today, except at Wilson, where the football team has a special superstition against them. Last time Wilson had a pregame rally, the Tigers sustained their only loss, 6-0, to Coolidge . . . Tech, catching up with Wilson in ticket sales, yesterday became the second school to sell out of student tickets, 1200 of them. Bell Vocational sold out last week . . . Paul Junior High has 100-ticket lead over its nearby big brother, Coolidge High, in the selling department. . . . Macfarland, Alice Deal, Taft and Langley Junior Highs are also doing their share . . . Police Chief Robert Barrett has assigned a large squad of police to the title classic. The men will contribute their time. The police have always done a fine job at this game with their uniformed presence adding to the color of the spectacle . . . Each member of Roosevelt High's "R" Club has sold four adult tickets. . . . The McKinley Alumni Circle T Club, headed by Byron Hayden, has sent out announcements to its members, encouraging them to back the team by attending the game.

Area Player of Week

Stan Burak of GW

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S Stan Burak, who wasn't credited officially with even one of the 370 yards the Colonials rolled up against Georgetown, is The Washington Post's college player of the week.

STAN BURAK

Burak's the blocking back, you see, and everyone knows that blockers aren't supposed to get any credit.

But last Saturday Stan made his last game one of his best.

The 5-foot-10, 190-pounder blocked indiscriminately and effectively for all four top ground-gainers. An indication that he played no favorites is revealed by these long-run figures—Frankie Cavallo, 28; Andy Davis, 23; Al DuGoff, 22, and Jimmy Kline, 22.

Without hesitation, Coach Bo Rowland calls Burak "the best blocking back in the South." "He could play quarterback for any single-wing team in the country."

Rowland can take a bow for Burak's performance. The Keiser, Pa., native spent his first two years at GW as an end. He excelled at that position, too. Skip Stahley, then head mentor, called him the finest blocking end he had ever coached.

ROWLAND had a high opinion of his work, too, and decided he'd take advantage of it by shifting him into the blocking back spot.

That was all right with Burak. He has the perfect temperament for the thankless job. Stan's quiet and studious and cooperative. If the coach wanted him to cut down would-be tacklers, well, he'd just go out and do it.

Burak didn't confine his activities to offense last Saturday or any other game he played. He's a fine line-backer and a 60-minute ballplayer. In the last three minutes, when Georgetown threatened to score again, Billy Conn fumbled going into the line. Burak was there to recover for GW on his four-yard line.

GW teammates appreciate Burak—he was cocaptain against the Hoyas. Andy Davis, top ground-gainer with 135 yards, said, "As long as Stan's in front of you, you don't worry much."

Passed dizzy on the floor, the second-place Washington Caps were almost passed in the National Basketball Association Eastern standings last night as the New York Knickerbockers systematically ground out an 89-74 margin at Uline Arena.

One of the smallest gatherings of the season—1535 fans—saw the Knicks come within half a game of tying Washington. It was the fourth loss in 10 games for the Caps, New York's seventh triumph in 13 games.

At the rate the Knicks were going they could have won by 100 points if enough quarters were played. They extended their lead in each successive period and wound up within a single point of their greatest margin.

Tacaro Briar Finishes an Inch Ahead of Dead Heat at Bowie

Bill Bennings . . .

AT BOWIE

DEAR FOLKS:

With Bowie unopposed the track has become a mecca for jockeys. Upward of 100 boys are here either for work or a holiday. Eighty saddle artists are registered—55 veteran riders and 25 apprentices. The scramble for mounts is something to see. Agents are as busy as the proverbial cat. One of the East's best boys couldn't get a single mount on the Tuesday program. Dick Dickman of Washington has purchased the promising 2-year-olds, Deluge and Alfudur, from Horatio Luro. Chris Rogers, current riding ace here, is a native of Canada but will soon become a full-fledged citizen of the United States. He has two children and has been riding for seven years. Attention Cox brothers — Arcave makes his next start in the Endurance Handicap. BILL.

$16.60 Shot Piloted by Robertson

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 22.—In a tight finish—an inch from a three-way dead heat—Tacaro Briar took a camera decision in today's feature event.

While the judges could declare a winner they were unable to separate the place horses and the dead heat sign was lighted for the second position with Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Briar White and Charles Hartwick's Flag Drill the steeds involved.

The three horses who figured in the red hot finish on the coldest racing day of the fall season were prominent from start to end in the test of a mile and a sixteenth.

The race was named the Port Tobacco and it was fitting that victory went to Tacaro Briar owned by Robert L. Hall, jr. of Upper Marlboro and part owner of a tobacco market.

Like yesterday's feature winner, Tacaro Briar is by the sire Neddie and was overlooked in the betting, paying $16.60 after the sparse crowd of 6000 had installed Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' Fleet Vixen, one lacking in fleetness today, as the favorite.

Jockey Jack Robertson gave Tacaro Briar everything that the time-worn expression "million-dollar-ride" implies. The winner was clocked in 1:47 4-5 over a fast track.

The day's second dead heat—this one for the front end—came in the seventh race. The judges tried for five minutes before they agreed Stemar Stable's Oozo and C. Rossasco's Hamlet were inseparable. Without a doubt, H. W. Eagley's Right Melat was third.

Oozo, handled by Nolan Griffith, paid $3.40, and Hamlet, with Nunzio Pariso up, returned $3.80. They were favorite and second choice, respectively, in the test of a mile and a furlong. The twin winners were clocked in 1.55 2-5.

Rockville, Md., fans had a chance to cheer in the second race when H. C. Allnutt of that town sent out Smarty Arty to win at a $64.80 mutuel. The 2-year-old was purchased at a recent Pimlico sale for $500. Sarge Swenke, who gained fame as trainer of Alsab, saddled the first winner, his Erinsville, a $20.60 shot.

Miller Talks At IBM Party

Seventy-three trophies were awarded to employes of I.B.M. for fishing, softball, bowling, Spanish checkers and photography. Miller is United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Ohio.

Georgia Tech Boss Says Dodd, Staff Will Stay in Jobs

Atlanta, Nov. 22 (AP).—Football Coach Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech, who's been wooed by many colleges, turned down another offer today.

Athletic Director W. A. Alexander announced that Dodd and the entire coaching staff would stay at Tech another year.

It was reported over the weekend that Dodd had been offered a $20,000 cash bonus, plus $20,000 a year on a ten-year contract.

Dodd's current salary at Tech is $9,600 a year. School regulations won't let him receive more than the $12,000 salary paid Tech's president. It was understood Dodd will receive a salary boost, and may get more in the form of an expense account or emolument.

AP Selections

Cornell Has 4 on Ivy Team; Gophers Get Three on Big 10

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—Cochampion Michigan and third-place Minnesota, with three berths each, monopolized the 1949 all-Big Ten football team selected for the Associated Press by conference coaches today.

Ohio State, who shared the title with Michigan, took two positions while one spot each went to Wisconsin, Illinois and Northwestern. Iowa, Purdue and Indiana failed to place.

There was not a single unanimous choice, although Michigan's Halfback Charles Ortmann and Wisconsin's banging Bob Wilson, converted from center to end this season, missed by one coach each.

Virginia's Johnny Papit Regains Nation's No. 1 Rushing Spot

11,500 Expected

G. W. High Host to W-L On Thursday

George Washington of Alexandria and Washington-Lee of Arlington play their twenty-fourth annual Thanksgiving morning football game Thursday, 11 a. m., at G.W. Stadium. A crowd of 11,500 is expected.

G. W. has an 8-1 record this season compared to 4-2-3 for W-L. G.W. has a psychological advantage. It has won 20 straight home games, including two straight over W-L.

Leading G.W. will be Backs Arlen Brown, George Nolan, Norm Henry, Bobby Stewart and Nellie Wood. Sparking W-L will be Bruce Hillenbrand, Jack Gilfillan and Slinging Sammy Eberht.

Gonzales Calm Over 3-16 Record Against Kramer

The fact that he won only three of the first 19 matches of his tour with Jack Kramer seems to worry Pancho Gonzales, 1949 national amateur champion, very little.

"I'm younger, stronger and I have more stamina. "I'll catch up," Gonzales said as he approached tomorrow night's pro tennis display at Uline Arena.

An opening singles match at 8:30 pits Frankie Parker and Pancho Segura, after which Parker and Kramer will team up against Segura and Gonzales in doubles.

Tulane ruined Virginia's undefeated record last week but couldn't stop Johnny Papit from regaining the top of the heap as the country's leading rusher.

Papit gained 113 yards on 19 carries to Eddie Price's even 100 in 23 attempts. His thrusts through Tulane's burly line sent his total yardage to 1153, the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau reported yesterday.

Unless' he's stopped cold by North Carolina—no other team has been able to do it this year—Papit's 57-yard lead over Mississippi's John Dottley and 108-yard advantage over Price should stand up.

Frank Mattingly, fine Hoya soph who had his worst day of the season against GW, still threw for 131 yards, and finishes up eighteenth leading passer.

Duck Season Here; Coots Are Plentiful

By Ralph Murdock

THE OFFICIAL duck hunting season opened last week. A good many birds are already on hand in this area but colder weather is needed to step up the sport. Coots are plentiful this year and the Chesapeake Bay around Holland Point is literally covered with this species. Blackheads usually produce the shooting but they are rather scarce at this time. A great season is predicted.

Murdock

AFTER THE MIDDLE of November the average angler has put aside his fishing gear and called it quits for the year. But the never-say-die angler has probably enjoyed the best rock fishing in this neck of the woods during the last 10 years. The general catches are running larger in quantity and bigger in size.

Here are some glowing examples: A party consisting of Richard C. Hughes, assistant general manager of the Rock Creek golf course; T. J. Gilleraski, Tom Griffin and James Melton nabbed 88 beauties while fishing with the reliable Glen Cockrell on the Marietta. The stripers ran from 1¾ to 5 pounds. The anglers were on the fishing grounds at sunrise and made their haul before noon.

In the afternoon, Al Grim landed 22 hefties that hit the 4-pound mark under the guidance of the same skipper. Glen had this to say: "There are enough fish in the Bay at present so that you can catch and sell enough fish to pay for your boat and still have plenty left. I have never seen the like of it."

THE PAST WEEK produced the best catches in the early morning. The reason is that the rock start feeding at sunrise and due to the abundance of alewives they get filled up early and are reluctant to take artificial bait in the afternoon.

But they always hit well just before dark. Lusby small buck-tail lures have produced the best results. Stanley Gordon, Hugo Stellabotta and John Papineau of Coral Hills landed 184 in a morning trip. They fished from the Marietta. The largest were 5-pounders and the smallest 1¼ pounds.

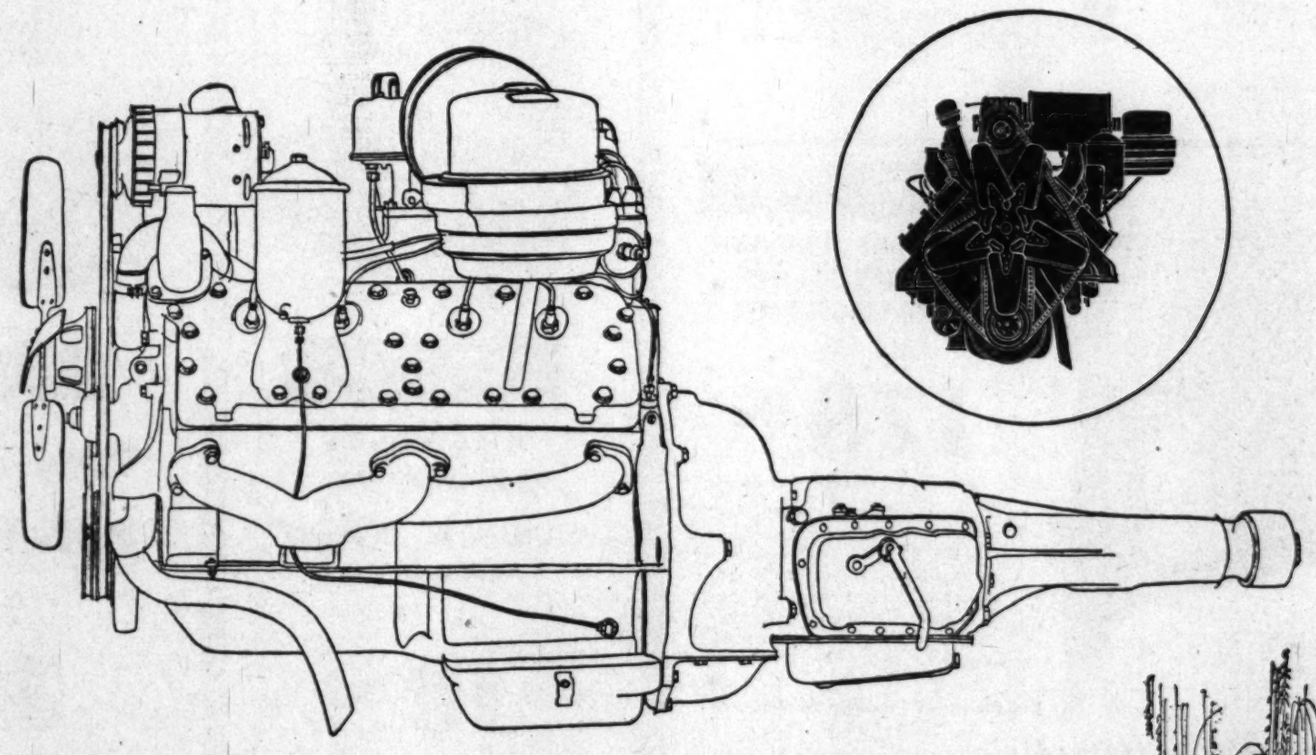
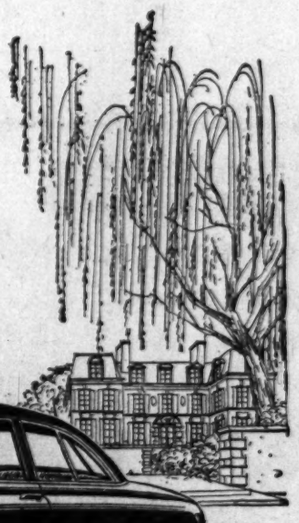
It's an inVincible "8"-that great Lincoln engine!





WHEN early performance reports from Lincoln owners first reached our ears, we were frankly skeptical.

For in the first few weeks, every new car owner thinks his new car is the very finest car there is.

Yet, month after month, the praise pours in unstintingly about the great new Lincoln engine.

"It is capable," owners state, "of the smoothest performance on the road!" To which statement we heartily agree.

For we have yet to see the new automobile—at any price—that can stand up to Lincoln on the highway.

Literally, the great new Lincoln engine—with the automatic responsiveness of HYDRA-MATIC*—is an inVincible "8"—and not merely for sheer stamina alone. For dependability and economy, too, it is again in a class by itself.

Agencies Must Absorb More Than 70 Pct. Of Pay Increase Cost

Federal agencies will be required by the Budget Bureau to absorb more than 70 percent of the cost of the recent pay-reclassification act. Most agencies will soak up the added cost out of available funds by refusing to fill vacancies.

CEA: Several staff members of the Council of Economic Advisors, followers of former Chairman Nourse, are reported to be preparing to resign.

CHRISTMAS is on Sunday this year as is New Year's Day. That means Federal workers won't be legally entitled to a holiday from work on either day. However, it's a safe bet that the President will declare a holiday for the Government on either Friday, December 23, or Monday, December 26.

HEALTH PROGRAMS: You can look for the President to request funds from Congress in January to carry out the employe health law in all Federal agencies. The Budget Bureau has decided tentatively to include funds for the program for all agencies in the 1951 budget. If approved by Congress, the program would be scaled down to bare essentials in Budget Bureau's plan.

PAY BOOSTS: Another sure request by the President—that members of Congress raise their own salaries to $25,000 to be effective January 1, 1952. Also, that the congressional restriction on the number of officials who can be placed in the three new super grades be lifted.

COMMERCE: Secretary Sawyer definitely will not engage in any bureaucratic squabble to grab control over the Government's transportation agencies. He'll take the additional job, however, if the President wishes it, a clear probability.

BEST-SELLER: The Prince of Nigeria recently wrote the Superintendent of Documents requesting a copy of "Infant Care." More than 35 million copies have been distributed of the booklet which was first written by Mrs. Max West in 1914. It's estimated that every other mother in this country has had a copy of the Government's No. 1 best-seller.

STORY: Budget Director Frank Pace likes to tell this story on himself. He accompanied the President to his home town of Little Rock, Ark. The President introduced him to his homefolks who gave him a big cheer. During the applause there was a pull on Pace's coat. The budget chief turned around to see the President who told him:

"You must be a terrific budget director or those people would have booed you."

Also open are tests for traffic management clerk, auditing clerk, $3100 to $3450, and safety program administrator, $3825 to $5400, to fill jobs in nearby States.

The hiring of temporary employes to help out during the Christmas rush is to begin next week at the city postoffice here. More than 4000, mainly veterans, will be hired at $1.26½ an hour. . . . The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report will hold a "cracker-barrel" conference at the Shoreham here on December 12 and 13. . . . Physicians, chemists and biochemists have until December 12 to file for jobs in Public Health's regular corps.

Police Arrest Man Freed by Appeals Court

Have a Warrant For One Suspect But Wait Around For Pickup Man

Only 16 days ago the United States Court of Appeals reversed the conviction on a numbers charge of Lawrence Accarino, 55, of 1310 Downing pl. ne.

The decision saved Accarino a long stay in the pokey and a $500 fine.

Detectives operating out of the Sixth Precinct Station arrested Accarino and a second suspect, Willie James Hackett, 29, of 4809 Fitch st. ne., at a filling station in the 6300 block of Georgia ave. nw.

They were charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence continued their hearing until November 30 and released them in $1500 bond each.

The detectives, acting on orders of Capt. Archie Winfree, said they had a warrant for Hackett's arrest but did not have one for Accarino.

The warrant was obtained, they said, after an undercover man made a numbers play with Hackett.

Yesterday, at about 1:30 p. m., the undercover man returned to the filling station, police said, and made a 60-cent play with Hackett after which the detectives moved in and arrested Hackett.

"Who picks up your numbers bets?" the detectives asked Hackett.

"I don't know, but he'll be here pretty soon," police said Hackett told them.

The detectives said they returned the money they had taken from Hackett, some of it marked, and told him to turn it in as usual when the collector arrived. They said they would be nearby in their parked car and instructed him to nod to them as a signal when the pickup man arrived.

A short time later, Accarino drove into the filling station, ostensibly to get gasoline. When Hackett nodded to the detectives, they walked over and placed Accarino under arrest.

On Accarino, the detectives said, were found numbers slips and marked money.

Vice squad detectives battered down the door of Accarino's apartment in October, 1948, seized evidence and arrested Accarino on a numbers charge.

Accarino was convicted in District Court but later the Court of Appeals ruled the police entry was illegal and as a result so was the evidence they seized.

Arlington Woman Appeals Fine and Jail Term

A 52-year-old Arlington woman was fined $50 and given a 30-day jail sentence yesterday in Arlington County Court on a charge of operating a lottery.

She is Mrs. Estelle McKnight, 1946 S. Lowell st., arrested in a raid October 20 by Detective Russell Runyon and Pvt. James Mangan. About 23 numbers books were confiscated, Runyon said. Mrs. McKnight noted an appeal.

Wholesale Milk Hearing Put Off

The Agriculture Department yesterday postponed until December 12 a public hearing on a proposed Federal order to regulate the handling of milk in the Washington milk marketing area.

The hearing originally was scheduled for November 28.

The postponment was requested by counsel for milk handlers and mid-Western shippers of milk and cream on the ground that they need more time to prepare testimony.

The program would set minimum prices from handlers and distributors to dairymen. Retail prices would not be regulated.

Stork Ships Early to Yule Shopper

Mrs. Joseph E. Leonard knew the stork was in the neighborhood—she was the mother of five children—but figured she'd be safe ducking downtown to Christmas shop yesterday.

Her husband, too, thought it was a safe bet to put in a full day at L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc., where he is an accountant.

Mrs. Leonard arrived at her home, 1735 S. Pollard st., Arlington, Va., a few minutes after 6 last night, put down her bundles and started looking for her husband.

He showed at 6:10 p. m. and was calmly advised: "We're going to Arlington Hospital—now."

They hopped in the car.

"By the time we reached Washington blvd. and Glebe rd.," said the husband, "I knew we weren't going to make it. I stopped the car and ran into a drugstore for help.

"The man behind the prescription counter didn't feel up to the situation, so we ran next door to a grocery store. A friendly man and a woman volunteered."

When they returned to the car, Mrs. Leonard had become the mother of another child, a girl.

The 32-year-old Mrs. Leonard and her young daughter were reported "doing nicely" last night at Arlington Hospital. Her husband was taking a good night's sleep.

Spingarn School Plans Are Approved

Plans for the $3,600,000 Spingarn High School got a green light yesterday from the District Board of Education committee on buildings, grounds and equipment.

The school, planned since before the war to relieve overcrowding among Negro public school students in Washington, is to be located near 24th st. and Benning rd. ne. It will have a capacity of 1600 pupils.

It will be the last word in high school planning, according to Merrel A. Coe, municipal architect, and will be the first public school building built in Washington since the war to have prewar finishes such as corridor wainscoting and terrazo floors in corridors.

Coe said yesterday he expected the project will be advertised for bids about December 15.

Ex-G-Men Elect Downey Rice as Vice President

Downey Rice, special consultant to the United States Attorney in the recent gambling investigations, has been elected vice president of the Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI.

A former Central High School basketball star now practicing law with his father, Fred Rice, he was an FBI agent for nine years, and worked at the bureau as a clerk for two years while he attended Columbus University Law School.

Rice received special commendations for his counter-espionage work in 1941-1942 in connection with the prosecution of eight German spies who landed on Long Island and in Florida during the war.

Commissioners Study ABC Revocation Appeal

An appeal from a District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board order revoking the liquor license of the Southland Restaurant, 628 4th st. sw., was taken under advisement by the Commissioners yesterday. The license will remain in effect until a decision is reached.

The ABC Board had revoked the Class C license issued to Bernard and Lillian Gorland after hearing testimony that the establishment did more bunsiness in alcoholic beverages than food.

Arlington Defendant Is Freed Because He Was Denied Phone

The court said the evidence was against him, but he had been denied his civil rights—so a defendant went free yesterday in Arlington.

Ernest Phillip Schoener, jr., a cook at the Circle Motor Court in Fairfax, was acquitted by Judge Hugh Reid of a charge of driving while drunk.

Judge Reid entered a memorandum expressing his belief that "the evidence actually adduced in court would ordinarily justify a conviction."

However, the judge said, Schoener was acquitted because the evidence showed he was not permitted by the jailer on duty to telephone his employer for bail on the night of his arrest.

Schoener, whose home is in Fincastle, Va., was arrested on the evening of November 2 by Arlington Policeman William G. Fawver.

Judge Reid said the record showed Schoener "was taken promptly before a magistrate and charged. A warrant was issued immediately and bail set at $500."

However, the judge continued, both the defendant and the arresting officer testified Schoener asked for permission to phone his employer and "there is no jail record of any telephone call . . ." He said the sheriff's instructions require that such records be kept.

Schoener, for whom bail was posted at 9:45 a. m., alleged "he was prejudiced by the delay," the judge noted.

The judge concluded: "The principle laid down by the Court of Appeals in the Winston Case required his discharge from custody."

According to Defense Attorney Oren R. Lewis, the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals ruled about a year and a half ago in the Winston case, which involved a drunk driving charge that a man cannot be deprived of the right to obtain evidence in his own behalf.

P-38 Repairman Charged by CAA With Violations

Crash-Landed Here While Flying Plane Without License, Agency Declares

The mechanic who repaired the P-38 before it collided with an Eastern airliner November 1 was charged yesterday with "flagrantly violating civil air regulations" in connection with repair and flight of his own plane.

He is Clarence E. Michehl, 33, of 1712 Cody dr., Silver Spring, Md. A dealer in surplus mechanical equipment, including airplane parts, he testified at the recent CAB hearing as to repairs he made on the ill-fated P-38.

The CAA charges against Michehl developed from the crash-landing of his own BT-13 trainer November 17 on the same runway over which the airline tragedy, which took 55 lives, occurred.

Formal Complaint Lodged

CAA, in a formal complaint filed with CAB in New York yesterday, asked that Michehl's certificate as an aircraft and engineer mechanic be revoked because "the pattern of his violations indicates an attitude of indifference for the safety of others and disregard for civil air regulations."

In a letter to Michehl, CAA asked him to pay $1500 in civil penalties for his alleged violations—which included flying without a pilot's license in a plane with badly corroded parts and without an operating two-way radio. CAA said he could fight the penalty in District Court.

List of Defects Given

Alleging that he lacked the requisite skill for a mechanic's certificate, CAA cited the following defects reportedly found by CAA inspectors in Michehl's wrecked plane:

The sliding plastic canopy was in such bad repair it yielded visibility rated as "poor to none."

Safety belts were rotted and frayed; an unapproved metal patch 18 by 20 inches was on one wing; leaking fuel tanks; gas gauge unreadable; corrosion of propeller shaft flange, spark plug, etc.

CAA further charged that he did not have a pilot's certificate; that the aircraft was not airworthy, had not been annually inspected, did not carry certificates of registration and airworthiness and its record on flying time was inaccurate and it did not have an operative two-way radio.

(One theory in the crash of the Eastern Airlines' DC-4 was that the colliding P-38's radio may not have been functioning properly.)

A CAA spokesman said that CAA investigation had not determined that the crash of Michehl's plane was caused by the mechanical defects reported by investigators.

The trainer, with Michehl at the controls, was about to land, when some 20 to 50 feet over the runway, it dropped. The crash destroyed the plane's landing gear, bent the propeller up and damaged structural parts of the wings, the CAA spokesman said. Neither Michehl nor his passenger, Charles T. Smith, 5605 Longfellow dr., Riverdale, was injured.

Woman, 38, Speaks

Son-in-Law's Marriage Called Spite

A Navy chief petty officer, who had dated a 38-year-old widow, married her 19-year-old daughter out of spite, the mother testified yesterday in District Court.

Mrs. Katherine Dunn, the portly, dark-haired mother who said she is known as "Pete," was a witness in the uncontested annulment proceeding filed against Richard Spence Taylor, 29, on behalf of Mrs. Elizabeth L. A. Taylor.

The daughter and her bridegroom lived together only four days, after which Taylor, according to the mother's testimony, told Elizabeth:

"I never had any intention of living with you; in a way, I did it to spite your mother."

Mrs. Dunn said she met Taylor in 1947, when he was stationed at West Potomac Park. Her daughters brought him to their home at 1029 10th st. ne., several times, she added.

She and Taylor went out to dinner "on occasions," Mrs. Dunn testified.

She later went to a hospital for an operation, but returned to discover Taylor was about to marry her daughter, then 17, Mrs. Dunn told Judge Charles F. McLaughlin.

"I didn't approve of this marriage; there was perjury and a lie in it," she declared.

"He put his arms around me and kissed me good night, but that was all," the girl said.

Baby Sitter Found Guilty Of Cruelty

A 44-year-old baby sitter was found guilty yesterday of cruelty to the 8-month-old boy she was entrusted to protect last September.

A District Court jury found that Mrs. Mollie R. Chambliss, 735 New Jersey ave. nw., "tortured, cruelly beat, abused and maltreated" William James Apple, jr., also of the New Jersey ave. address.

According to testimony before Judge Edward M. Curran, the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Apple, sr., left the infant with Mrs. Chambliss for several days starting September 9. They gave her $10 to look after the infant.

Reggie Lewis, a janitor at the apartment, testified that he discovered the child abandoned on a staircase that night, his face a mass of bruises. A physician said the child's eyes were blacked and a tooth loosened.

In her defense, Mrs. Chambliss said that two men visited her that night and she took a "little" to drink.

She accidentally dropped young William against a playpen, she continued, rushed him to an apartment where relatives of the Apples live, only to find no one in.

For 10 or 15 minutes thereafter, she said, everything went "blank."

Assistant United States Attorney John C. Conliff, jr., charged that the "little to drink" consisted of at least two quarts of beer and some whisky.

Snapshot of Robbery Victim Leads to Arrest of 2 Suspects

A snapshot of a woman yesterday led to the arrest of two men on robbery charges.

Police were questioning one of the suspects, James Hawkins, 19, of 612½ N st. nw., about a gas station robbery when a snapshot fluttered to the floor as he emptied his pockets at detectives' request.

The picture bore the name "Erna Bigler." Police files revealed that an "Erna Bigler" of 649 Hamilton st. nw., reported her pocketbook snatched November 18.

Confronted with this, Hawkins admitted the snatching and the robbery of two gas stations, police said.

Eugene H. White, 31, of 1615 12th st. nw., arrested with Hawkins, also admitted being involved in the gas station crimes, the officers reported.

The men were picked up after Fred Potts, 62, manager of Price's Gas Station, 1100 1th st. se., reported he was held up at pistol-point and the station robbed of $117.58 at 3:40 a. m. yesterday. The men fled in a car but Potts managed to spot the license number.

About an hour later, Police Pts. William J. McLaughlin and John A. Jones, patrolling in a Second Precinct scout car near 10th and M sts. nw., flagged down an auto bearing the tab number reported by Potts.

In addition to the Price holdup, police said White and Hawkins admitted holding up a gas station at 4853 Deane ave. ne., and escaping with $60 Saturday morning.

The pair was held in $10,000 bond each for the grand jury on robbery charges by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

In another holdup, a Marine motorist was robbed of $380 early yesterday by two hitchhikers he had picked up near the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, 14th and C sts. sw.

The victim was Corpl. Sutton Kinter, jr., 21, stationed at Quantico, Va. Kintner reported the men jammed a gun in his side after he cleared the 14th st. bridge en route to a nearby Hot Shoppe for coffee.

Mystery Blast Kills Woman on Farm

MRS. LUCILLE ALLNUT
Fatally injured

A 30-year-old woman, former music supervisor for Montgomery County schools, was killed yesterday by the unexplained explosion of a wood stove in the kitchen of her farm home near Dawsonville yesterday.

Mrs. Lucille Allnutt died in Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, at 11 a. m., two hours after the blast. Police said a fragment of the stove severed a vein in her groin and she bled to death.

Gaithersburg firemen said Mrs. Allnutt apparently was washing clothes when the blast went off. There was nothing to indicate, they added, that she had been tampering with the stove.

The explosion was so fierce that pieces of cast iron were imbedded in the refrigerator and metal cabinets. Kitchen and staircase windows were shattered and the ceiling of the room was damaged.

First to reach the injured woman was Lester Luhn of Dawsonville, a painter working in the house. He said the explosion sounded "like three sticks of dynamite going off."

Luhn's son, Millard, also on the premises, called the Gaithersburg rescue squad.

The woman's husband of two years, Benoni Allnutt, was repairing fences on the 400-acre farm, which is about 12 miles west of Rockville. The third member of the household, Miss Jerry Johnson, niece of the dead woman, was not at home. She is a secretary at Poolesville High School.

Gaithersburg Fire Chief Charles P. Fox said cause of the blast is undetermined. He estimated damage at $300.

Montgomery County police were investigating on the slim theory that there might have been unexploded dynamite fragments in the wood stumps burned in the stove. They said Allnutt had dynamited stumps last spring.

Mrs. Allnutt, a native of Tennessee, came to Montgomery County 10 years ago. Just recently, she was named a member of Montgomery County Council's Library Advisory Committee.

Besides her husband and niece she leaves her father, W. J. Johnson, and a sister, Lyda Johnson, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; three brothers, Lee Johnson, of Johnson City, Tenn.; Eugene, of Erwin, Tenn., and Jack Johnson, of Louisiana.

Hockey Game Injury Put At $17,000

A housewife was awarded $17,000 and her husband $3000 yesterday for injuries she suffered March 19, 1946, when she was injured by a flying puck during a hockey game at Uline Arena.

The suit, against Uline Ice, Inc., charged that Mrs. Mary Katherine Sullivan, 28, of 4972 Benning rd. ne., suffered permanent impairment of sight in her right eye.

Defense lawyers maintained that Mrs. Sullivan attended the game at her own risk.

The District Court jury, before Judge F. Dickson Letts, deliberated three hours. Damages to Mrs. Sullivan's husband, James, 30, were awarded for expenses and other considerations.

Max Dill

San Francisco, Nov. 22 (AP).—Max Dill, member of the famous comedy team of Kolb and Dill, died at Stanford Hospital here today. He was 71. Death was from heart complications following an abdominal operation a few days ago.

The comedy team was a hit in vaudeville and stage shows from before the turn of the century through the First World War.

Two Soldiers Killed in Auto Crash

Two Andrews Air Force Base soldiers were killed in a Maryland auto crash early yesterday, while in the District a 51-year-old woman was seriously injured in another auto accident.

The soldiers were identified as Herbert L. O'Brien, 19, of Grenada, Miss., and Lloyd J. R. Green, 20, of Summerville, Ga., both attached to the 806th Aviation Engineering Battalion.

They were killed when their car crashed about 4 a. m. into an abutment at Priest Bridge near U. S. 50 and U. S. 301 about 20 miles east of Washington.

The engine, driven into the front seat, pinned O'Brien. Police said O'Brien was driving north at the time of the crash.

The injured woman, reported in a serious condition at Emergency Hospital from arm and leg fractures and chest injuries, is Mrs. Dorothy M. Harris, 51, of 5170 Fulton st. nw.

Mrs. Harris was jammed in the wreckage of the car she was driving when it collided with an American Railway Express truck at Loughboro rd. and Weaver st. nw., at 3:30 p. m. The truck was operated by Leonard Reed, 27, of 1624 D st. ne.

Boris Dinerstien, 51, of New York City, suffered a fractured leg when struck by a taxi while crossing Pennsylvania ave. near Treasury pl. nw. Dinerstien was removed to Emergency Hospital. Police said the cab was driven by Nicholas Kanelopoulos, 32, of 27 16th st. se.

Negligent Homicide Charge Dropped

The United States Attorney's Office yesterday nolle prossed a negligent homicide charge against Woodrow Wilson, 36, of 1268 Oates st. ne., for a traffic death here.

According to police, Wilson's automobile on October 21 struck down Earl L. Mann, 49, of 1222 12th st. nw., while he was crossing 11th and N sts. nw., from a streetcar loading platform. Mann was a retired Army sergeant. Wilson is an airlines porter.

Georgetown Loses Debate To Girls

Georgetown University students put aside serious discussion of the world and its problems last night to indulge in a bit of unacademic whimsey designed to prove men have greater will power than women.

Occasion for the mock debate was the 130th anniversary of the Philodemic Debating Society.

Hopelessly outfought from the beginning, the 700 "gentlemen of Georgetown," who came to cheer their heroes, Vincent Anello and Stephen Roger, reluctantly conceded defeat to Margaret Reeves of the Georgetown nursing school and Margaret Maloney of Visitation Convent.

Miss Reeves dealt a devastating blow in the first round when she declared that when Kipling compared woman to "a rag, a bone and a hank of hair," he might well have added that man was "a brag, a drone and a tank of air."

Miss Maloney stingingly announced that men's heads are like doorknobs,—any woman can turn them.

Anello countered that Adam languished happily in Paradise until God saw fit to make Eve from one of his ribs (probably a spare rib, he said aside) and then his trouble began.

Debating society president Richard Gordon explained the performance was designed solely to create student interest in the society. More serious debates are scheduled in the future.

Amvets Give Carillon to Arlington

An electronic carillon of English chimes and Flemish bells is being installed in the amphitheater of Arlington Cemetery by AMVETS in honor of the dead of World War II.

Harold Russell, national AMVETS commander, announced that President Truman will accept the $25,000 carillon at dedicatory services at 3 p. m. on December 21.

The carillon, manufactured in Pennsylvania, will be played then for the first time by Dr. Arthur Bigelow, bellmaster of Princeton University. Thereafter the bells will sound daily at the hour of retreat.

The carillon can be played automatically by hand-cut plastic music rolls, or manually.

English bells provide the tone for chimes while the Flemish bells sound in four-part harmony somewhat like a piano. Congress authorized the Secretary of the Army to accept the carillon.

School Bond Sale Voted in Arlington

The Arlington School Board last night voted to sell $2,500,000 worth of the $4,750,000 school bond issue authorized in the November, 1948, elections.

Henderson H. Miller, municipal bond dealer of New York City who will handle the sale, told the board notice of the sale will appear today in local and New York newspapers.

The board voted to sell the bonds at three different interest rates depending on length of maturity, none of the rates to be higher than 5 percent. Miller reported the combination sale would result in a lower average interest rate than a sale at a single interest rate.

Sealed bids will be opened at the school board office, 2732 Wilson blvd., at 11 a. m., December 7. The bonds probably will be delivered and the board will receive the money December 21, Miller said.

The board voted to purchase a three-acre plot of ground with two houses adjoining the Washington-Lee High School athletic field, from the William Douglas estate and the late Mr. Douglas' son, Lee Douglas, for $57,400.

Located south of 13th st. and west of Quincy st., the property will be used for home economics classes and related subjects. The board is expected to occupy the property by the middle of December.

Postlude

Casadesus Scores in 2 Concertos

By Paul Hume

Robert Casadesus appeared last night with the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall in two capacities.

He was pianist in two concertos, one of which was his own. The other was the second by Franz Liszt. In both the great French artist illustrated the art of piano playing as few men today can. He has never belonged to the school of pounders.

His tone is delicate, remarkably sensitive. Yet it is never fragile. There is tremendous strength and vigor in his work, always marked by the most scrupulous rhythmic sense.

A Difficult Work

In his own concerto in E Major, Casadesus has written a work few pianists will essay. It is hard, and its rewards are subtle. The greater part of the thematic material is given to, and expounded in, the orchestra. The keyboard is largely taken up with varied figurations.

The sound of the orchestra is often arresting, and in the second movement most original. Yet as a whole, the music offers little that is new, or to which the mind can return in retrospect.

Ormandy and the orchestra gave their finest accompaniments in both works. Their fireworks and great pianism made the Lizst the triumph it must be if it is to survive.

Vigorous Composer

Their account of Mozart's Jupiter symphony was less satisfactory. Mozart is one of the most vigorous of composers. It is highly questionable to play any of his slow movements with all strings muted. The outer movements of the great score lacked an incisive bite from the strings. The trio of the minuet moved with a fine bounce that would have helped the rest.

Ravel's Rapsodie Espagnol sounded full of rich suggestions and gorgeous colors. Its early episodes lacked the subtlest nuances but the finale flared into blazing fire.

4 Months in Jail, $200 Fine Imposed In Auto Fatality

Glenn Cox, jr., 26, of 707 Mount Vernon pl. nw., was given four months in the Maryland House of Correction and fined $200 yesterday in Silver Spring Police Court on charges arising from a fatal auto accident October 1.

Cox was found guilty of manslaughter and drunken driving after police testified he was the driver of a car which crashed into a telephone pole on Old Bladensburg rd. near Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, causing the death of a passenger, William C. Harmon, 23, of College Park.

In court, Cox admitted he had been drinking, but denied he was driving the death vehicle.

In another case, disorderly conduct charges against seven Bullis Prep students were dropped by State Attorney Walter W. Dawson, on grounds of insufficient evidence. The seven were arrested October 23 after an altercation outside a Silver Spring restaurant.

Hod Carriers' Suit Settled Out of Court

A suit disputing which of two locals of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union is entitled to have its members work on apartment buildings here was settled out of District Court yesterday.

The litigation had been brought by the Building Construction and Materials Yards Local Union 764 against the International. Local 764 claimed it was entitled under union rules to jurisdiction over all common laborers in the apartment house field but that Local 74 had taken over workers on apartment buildings more than four stories high.

Local 764 contended that this was in effect a raiding tactic, since it would drive members to the Local 74.

Reporters were told by union attorneys that a pooling arrangement will be worked out under which both unions may participate in the construction involved.

Local 764 is represented by Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue. The international's attorney is Nicholas J. Chase.

She is in good health and without any help takes a Yellow cab into Washington to visit her daughter, who is sick in a hospital. "I spend my whole life in devotion to her," Mrs. Horne said

Priests Aid Police In Trapping Auto Theft Suspects

Three youths reportedly apprehended with the aid of two Catholic priests early yesterday were held for further court action on a charge of unauthorized use of an automobile.

William H. Baxter, 18, of 622 M st. nw., was placed under $2000 bond in Municipal Court for grand jury action. The other two, each 17, were held for Juvenile Court action.

Father Joseph B. Coyne of St. Gabriel's Church, looked out of the rectory at 26 Grant Circle nw. in time to see his auto being driven away. He phoned police while his associate, Father John B. Roerder, jumped into his own car and gave chase.

A few blocks away the car stopped. Two boys remained in the car. The third ran. While Pvt. Edward J. White, 28, of the Tenth Precinct guarded the pair, Father Roeder and Pvt. Webster Dawson trapped the third boy in a yard a few blocks away.

Clothing Drive Director Sees Success Ahead

The Thanksgiving clothing and soap collection being conducted this week in every Catholic parish in the Washington area is receiving generous response, its director, the Rev. E. Jerome Winter, reported last night.

The appeal for usable clothing, shoes and bar soap will continue through Sunday and is part of the Nation-wide collection, sponsored by the War Relief Service-National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Collection centers in all Catholic parishes are open throughout the day and evening. Contributed articles will go to needy refugees in Germany, Austria, the Near East and China, regardless of creed, race or nationality, Father Winter emphasized.

Silver Spring Boys Club Elects Marstella

Annexation Fund Voted In Alexandria

Alexandria City Council last night set aside $2000 to begin study of possible annexation of adjoining territory.

The money will pay for a survey to find what areas should be included in annexation, and financial problems relating to them.

Councilman Albert A. Smoot, head of the annexation committee, said his group cannot make any recommendations unless it gets information supplied by the survey. At this time, he said, the committee doesn't even know whether annexation is advisable.

Smoot asserted, however, that surrounding counties are "bringing great pressure on the Legislature . . . to make it very difficult for the city to annex."

In view of this, Smoot said, and the fact that the city now has less than 350 acres of undeveloped land left, he urged the annexation proposal be carried forward at this time.

Expenditure of the $2000, approved on first reading, will pay for the firm of R. Stewart Royer and Associates, Richmond, to conduct the survey. Smoot mentioned Fairfax County as a possibility, but said there was no possibility of annexing any Arlington territory.

Council also took steps to set up a pension and retirement plan for police and firemen. Councilman Roy C. Bragg, initiator of the plan, with Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim, called it the start of a program to cover all city employes.

Outright Grant of $10,000

Under their proposal, the city would make an outright grant of $10,000 with $13,871 to be added by the city's matching 3 percent fund the first year. Of this, $8400 would be spent the first year in payments to eligible persons now receiving $100-a-month.

An ordinance prepared by Bragg and Bendheim was referred to a committee for study. The committee will report at the next council meeting.

October Returns On D.C. Sales Tax Total $993,700

District sales tax returns on October sales through yesterday totaled $993,700—largest amount collected by the payment deadline in the three months the tax has been in effect.

September collections, which ultimately reached $1,080,000, stood at only $949,000 at the same time last month. Total August collections were only $846,000.

Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke said the October figure is certain to go over the million-dollar mark with payments from merchants granted extensions. District budget officials had estimated monthly receipts of just under a million dollars.

PUC Sets Hearing On Bus Line Cut in Bradbury Heights

The District Public Utilities Commission will hold a public hearing December 2 on a request of the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines, Inc., for permission to stop its Bradbury Heights local night service.

In support of its request to discontinue the run between 7 p. m. and 1:45 a. m., W. M. & A. stated that there is very little demand for the service; it has lost money; no District resident served by this run would be forced to walk more than three blocks to catch another bus.

The hearing will be at 10 a. m. in Room 203, District Building.

Man Sentenced To 18 Months

John Richard Clements, 42, a Washington mechanic, was sentenced to serve 18 months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday by Judge Charles C. Marbury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md.

Clements was convicted of manslaughter in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Mrs. Hazel Clement, 34, August 1, at their home, 5318 Gallatin st., Rogers Heights, Md., by a jury on November 9, but sentencing was deferred to permit an investigation by the parole officer.

Clements and his wife had been drinking, it was testified, for three days prior to the shooting and he had started to go to the basement for target practice when the wife was shot accidentally.

Just Wasn't Cricket

Love Conquers (30) All In Monty's Field Order; It Was Greek to Greeks

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE ARE more anecdotes tearing around about Field Marshal Montgomery than anyone—should they be so inclined—could shake a stick at. Oddly, some of the most amusing tales center about the El Alemein campaign and the hazards of translating Montgomery's orders to the First Greek Brigade which was part of his command.

Sometime before the great battle the general explained the situation with graphic simplicity, using tennis terminology, approximately as follows: "A few weeks ago the score was 30 love. Perhaps today it's 30 all and I think it's soon going to be 30-40 in our favor."

The Greek translator, a smart young officer who happened to be an Oxford graduate, dutifully commenced turning English into Greek for his own brigadier, an elderly professional soldier whose culture had been acquired the hard way.

Only Sports Catch On

"WHAT'S ALL THIS ABOUT?" queried the Greek colonel in amazement.

"It's tennis," explained the translator somewhat inadequately.

"What's tennis got to do with this?" the colonel snapped "Aren't we fighting any more?"

Just before the final battle of El Alemein General Montgomery switched from tennis to cricket in issuing the Order of the Day. "We are going to hit Rommel out of Africa for 6" the future Viscount of Alemein stated triumphantly. Now "Hit out for 6," means hitting the ball full tilt outside the boundary line. The Greek translator had a fearful time. It took all his Oxford training plus considerable imagination to get this into the more classic, less sportif Greek language. And despite his efforts the elderly Greek brigadier never did understand!

Problems for Pooch Lovers

CALLING MARY HAWORTH! Have you a maladjusted pooch? One who keens or takes to active destruction when left alone evenings? Then, have him or her psychoanalyzed immediately!

Take as example the State Department and Mrs. Bob Joyce's French poodle, Cocolo. They bought him as a puppy in France. Stationed in Trieste where household help is plentiful, the happy pup was never left alone.

The first sign of maladjustment was noticed when they took him to the Hotel Crillon in Paris and left him one evening. When they returned, the poodle had practically destroyed the apartment door.

In Washington, where help pops out nights, the situation was aggravated. It got so bad that every time the Joyces were asked to dinner, the dog had to be parked with stay-at-home friends. The other afternoon, when they went to the National Gallery opening, Cocolo had to be checked with a veterinarian.

Freud Enters Picture

BUT, meanwhile, a canine psychoanalyst, Mrs. Bettye Clancy of the Hermitage Kennels was recommended.

The first question asked Mrs. Joyce was a detailed account of the pup's early childhood. This drew more or less a blank. The next was—is he a foreigner? Of course he was!

It seems that foreign-born poodles have a difficult time adjusting to our tempo—and our evening-empty houses. Certain drastic measures were suggested to the Joyces as cure—including throwing a can filled with rocks at the front door (when leaving for a night out, first waiting outside for the dog to begin barking.)

Since the Joyces occupy a rented house, so far they've hesitated to go this far—it comes out cheaper to check Cocolo at a kennel than re-do a door. Meanwhile they're working on another tack—NOT recommended by the psychoanalyst. Another Government functionary has brought in from the country a mongrel bitch named Ana Pauker. Time will tell.

DURING THE HOLIDAYS most big cities whip up a number of subscription dances to divert the reasonably uppercrust teen-agers. These gambols are quite independent from the various dancing classes and, in New York, for instance, range from the Get-Togethers, Holidays, Junior Supper Dances to the Colonys, Metropolitans and finally, the Debutante Junior Assemblies.

Washington kiddies, however, to date have been entertained rather haphazardly. But this omission is about to be rectified through the initiative of Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, who has spurred a group of nine other ladies to action. On December 28 at the Sulgrave Club they're sponsoring a Christmas Assembly Dinner Dance for teens.

Since the Sulgrave Club's capacity is limited, only about 250 all told will be invited. Because it's a dinner dance the deal is ideal for mammas of girls who are thus spared the agony of scrounging for the reluctant young male.

Red Feather Parade to Precede Chest Report Luncheon Today

IF COMMUNITY CHEST campaign contributions reach the three million dollar mark at the general report luncheon today, workers will feel they have something to be thankful for when Thanksgiving Day is observed tomorrow.

This was the feeling around Chest headquarters yesterday, as plans were readied for the luncheon, fourth to be held for all soliciting units, including the county organizations.

The luncheon will be preceded by a parade of the Red Feather agencies. It will form on 17th st. between I and K sts. nw. at about 11:30 a. m. The paraders will start the march to the Washington Hotel at about noon, accompanied by the Army Band and the Marine Corps Drum and Bugle Corps.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will address the luncheon. Community Chest Campaign Chairman Frank Luchs will preside.

Officials of Greater Washington hospitals which are members of the Health Service Agency will be guests of honor at the head table. The HSA is the Community Chest-financed group from which persons with insufficient back-log may finance their hospital expenses.

At three report meetings held Monday, the Community Chest reached 72.40 percent of its $3-991,719 goal, as total contributions of $2,890,195.76 were reported. Previous high had been 69.15 percent of the goal.

At the business luncheon held Monday, Everett J. Boothby, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., pointed out the city's utilities have reached 102 percent of their quota and challenged:

"If they can do it, why can't some other companies do the same?" He called on businessmen to "recognize their responsibility. If we fall in this campaign we have failed in our duty to preserve the American way of life."

Cedars Are Green

Lebanon's Independence Celebrated at Reception

By Marie McNair

The Cedars of Lebanon played a prominent part at the reception yesterday afternoon given by the Lebanese Minister and Mme. Malik to celebrate their country's sixth year of independence.

The red and white striped flag with a green cedar tree on the white field flew from a standard in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel where the fete was given and where the Minister and Mme. Malik make their home. A centerpiece of red and white carnations, with asparagus fern simulating a cedar, decorated the long buffet table and sprays of cedar were strewn over the white cloth.

For the hosts it was a happy day.

During the last six years the government of the Lebanese Republic has been engaged in reforming and developing its administrative machinery as well as ironing out social and economic problems which have arisen since the war.

When all foreign troops withdrew from Lebanon in 1946, the will of the people to live as a free and independent nation was completely fulfilled.

Minister Malik and petite Mme. Malik smiled a greeting to several hundred members of diplomatic and official Washington yesterday—Mme. Malik in a gown of midnight blue satin of Paris inspiration. Her long straight skirt was slashed provocatively from the ankle midway to the knee and the scalloped boat neckline dipped at the back. A bright accent was the scarlet chiffon handerchief she held in her hand.

With a party given by Gen. and Mrs. Conger Pratt and another by Miss Rose Saul both going on at the same time at the nearby Kennedy-Warren, guests were apt to meet each other coming and going at all three.

Many Diplomats There

The Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon, who was alone at the Lebanese fete, picked up pretty Senora de Dillon for the Pratts' party and wound up at Rose Saul's gathering on the floor above. Clarence Hewes and his sister, Mrs. Robert Flowerree, who'll be going back to New Orleans Thanksgiving afternoon, went first to the Wardman Park, then to the Kennedy-Warren.

The New Zealand Ambassador and Lady Berendsen, back on the Washington scene briefly from the U. N. sessions, greeted the Minister and Mme. Malik, then were going on to say "how-de-do" to General and Mrs. Pratt and their guest, Miss Louise Boyd.

Mme. Wellington Koo, without her husband, the Chinese Ambassador, was at the Maliks' party, chatting with the Australian Ambassador, Norman Makin, and the Luxembourg Minister, Hugues LeGallais, who were there without their wives.

Gen. Vaughan Attends

Good looking Madame Boheman, wife of the Swedish Ambassador, wearing a straight black frock with deep pockets, stopped to exchange pleasantries with the British Ambassador and Lady Franks. Gen. Harry Vaughan, President Truman's Military Aide, wore his medals across his chest, while Mrs. Vaughan, in hunter's green, topped her costume with a taupe felt hat.

The Minister of Hashemite Jordan and Madame Haikal were among the guests. Madame Pandit, the Indian Ambassador, came early and was among the first to leave. The Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin, without Madame Erkin, and the Finnish Minister and Madame Jutila were others from the diplomatic corps.

A dark-haired young man with trim mustache and even trimmer goatee turned out to be Archie Roosevelt, jr.—with the State Department's Voice of America in New York and at the party with his cousin, Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, whose blue brocade frock matched her eyes.

Flying to U. N.

Al Lilienthal told me he's flying to New York today to petition U. N. for aid to 700,000 Arab refugees on behalf of 30 leading Americans of 14 American organizations.

Miss Minerva Bernardino watched the scene from the sidelines; so did Col. William Eddy, former United States Ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador, made her stay a brief one and others lingering longer were Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University; Mme. Economou-Gouras, wife of the Greek Minister, smartly turned out in black; the Ceylonese Ambassador and Mme. Corea, the latter in a red and gold sari; Anwar Niazi, Second Secretary of the Egyptian Embassy; Mekin Onaran, Executive Director of the International Bank, and Mme. Onaran; James S. Moose, jr., Deputy Director of the office of African and Near Eastern Affairs of the State Department; and Park Armstrong, jr., who is Special Assistant to the Secretary of State for Research and Intelligence, with Mrs. Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. David Olson Entertain at Dinner Dance

Mr. and Mrs. David Olson entertained at a dinner dance last evening at Hotel 2400 where they make their home. Cocktails were served in the Olsons' apartment and the group dined and danced in the lounge.

Guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Lanahan of Louisville and Paducah, Ky., Steven Straske and Miss Adeline Ward of Somerset, Ky., the latter, a sister of the hostess.

Guests included the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen, the Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila, Dr. Gaste Tobar, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Admiral and Mrs. Robert McConnell, Col. and Mrs. Robert Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freer, Comdr. and Mrs. Norman Bowles, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Maj. Kemp Slaughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Babe, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Miss Marjorie Maxie, Dr. Fernando Sacasa, A. L. Lintor, Mrs. Helen Sparks, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, William H. Chambers, jr., Mrs. Montfort Moodie, Miss Martha York, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Horgan, M. and Mme. Chautemps, the Rev. Porter White, Mrs. Alva Brewer and Miss Patricia Brewer.

Board Has Lunch

Members of the ladies' board of the Georgetown Hospital lunched yesterday in the Mayflower lounge. Those attending were Mrs. J. Winthrop Peabody, Mrs. Henry I. Quinn, Mrs. Murray Copeland, Mrs. Harold Jeghers, Mrs. Donald Doyle, Mrs. Grace Colliflower, Mrs. Vincent Hungerford, Mrs. Henry Devlin, Mrs. Benjamin J. Mundell, Mrs. Frederick Burke, Mrs. James Fallon, Mrs. Lawrence Rapee, Mrs. Lowell Bradford, Mrs. Basil Blumenthal, Mrs. Edward Cummings, Mrs. Garrett Whiteside, Mrs. Donald DeVol, Mrs. Stuart Lydane, Mrs. James Cahill, Mrs. Donald Nolan, Mrs. John Walsh and Mrs. Edgar Davis.

Conversation And Cocktails Blend at Fete

By Elizabeth Maguire

Miss Rose Willoughby Saul's apartment at the Kennedy-Warren was one of the bright spots of Washington during yesterday's cocktail hour. Nearly 200 guests dropped by between 6 and 8 p. m., and all were old friends.

Conversation flowed pleasantly in the several rooms where cocktails were served, and there was a choice array of hors d'oeuvres, such as tiny shrimps with delicious sauce, thinly sliced roast beef on small biscuits, olives, almonds and stuffed celery. Coffee and tea were served with small cakes, and there were flowers everywhere.

Lovely Apartment

Venetian mirrors, modern paintings and lovely colors make Miss Saul's apartment one of the prettiest in Washington. Her drawing room walls are off-white with a pink tint; the ceiling is a rose bronze, and draperies are light brown taffeta. In another room the walls are soft antique green and the ceiling petal pink.

Miss Saul received yesterday in a charming black taffeta frock, ankle length. Her many guests included Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Saul, Judge and Mrs. Edgar Murdock, Mme. Vera Petcheck, the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon, and Ambassador at Large of Spain and Senora Lequerica.

Dior Gown Noted

Also, Maj. Taylor Simmons, Mrs. William Mann, Mrs. Thomas Hagan, Miss Claire Snow, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Portner, Frederick Roy, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris (who say their daughter, Laura Mae, may be home at Christmas time), Mrs. Morris Cafritz in a Dior cocktail frock with jagged off-shoulder neckline and broad brimmed hat; Parr Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Capt. and Mrs. John Parker Jackson and George Livingston Williams.

Mrs. Truman Honor Guest At Luncheon

MRS. TRUMAN lunched yesterday with Mrs. Angus Dun, wife of the Bishop of Washington, at the Bishop's house in Cathedral Close. Guests, numbering 10, included ladies of the Cathedral Association and All Hallows Guild. The table had a centerpiece of bronze chrysanthemums and beech leaves, and to carry out the autumn motif copper plates were used.

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery was honored last evening at a dinner given by the British Ambassador and Lady Franks. The dinner was at the embassy with covers laid for 20. This evening the marshal will dine with Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins, and he will lunch today with Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

Ambassador Is Host

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, was host at dinner last evening at the embassy. Miss Carolina Nabuco was hostess for her brother.

Among the guests were the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Webb, Feitas Valle, Brazilian special mission delegate to U. N.; former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies, former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Camille Gutt and Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan Miller.

Californian Entertained

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Conger Pratt entertained at cocktails yesterday for Miss Louise Boyd of California who is an old friend. Miss Boyd joined Mrs. Pratt in England a fortnight ago and returned with her to Washington. She will be General and Mrs. Pratt's guest at the Army and Navy game on Saturday and after that will return to California.

A noted geographer, Miss Boyd has headed her own expiditions to Greenland and among other accomplishments has written a book on Poland.

Among those there yesterday, most of them old friends of the guest of honor, were a number of General and Mrs. Pratt's friends whom they knew when the general was in command at the Presidio in San Francisco.

Ambassador's Child

The Nicaraguan Ambassador and Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter, their fifth child, yesterday at Georgetown Hospital. The baby has been named Julia Delores.

The other children are Guillermo Anastasio, Lillian Salvadora, Luis Ramon and Edda Maria.

Schools Tune Up

Music Bonus Ready for D. C. Children

By Paul Hume

Washington's school children are getting their biggest musical break in history.

Real, live orchestral programs especially planned and played for them by the National Symphony Orchestra will come right to them in their schools.

These programs will be played during regular school hours. The children will gather in classrooms and auditoriums to hear the music broadcast over Station WQQW. The orchestra will play six of these concerts during the season.

Cost Guaranteed

The cost of the orchestra has been guaranteed by five Washington business firms and an anonymous giver. In past years the children paid a small admission charge of 40 cents. Now the music will come to them free.

Library Established

In addition they will have many chances to become acquainted with music. Notes for the different programs will be prepared by the heads of the music departments and sent to music teachers throughout the District school system.

Wall plaques showing in colorful array the seating plan of the National Symphony will be sent to all schools.

Of great significance is the establishment of a library of phonograph records which can be circulated among the schools before and after the concerts to help the young listeners become more familiar with the music they hear. This library is available for use at the present time.

These and more plans were cheered yesterday by officials of schools and orchestra. Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony, has consistently placed music for Washington school children high on his list of "musts" for the resident orchestra.

The father of four children, Mitchell has done much of the work in securing the financial assistance of contributing business houses in the program.

Needed No Urging

Members of the women's committee of the orchestra needed no urging to get into the new program. Through their efforts the record library has been established. They hope to bring about long-range planning of programs and further improvements through close work with the school authorities.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, prophesied great enrichment for the school children who will hear the music. At the present time District elementary school children have only one half-hour per month for music.

The machinery for the new, free programs and broadcasts began moving last spring when the women's committee chairman, Mrs. Theodore W. Dominick, and its recording secretary, Mrs. Warren Ege, went to Pittsburgh to attend a meeting of women's committee delegates from orchestras all over the country.

Found D. C. Lagging

They found Washington was lagging behind most of the country in providing music for school children. The National Symphony Orchestra is the focal musical institution of this community. The women returned home determined to improve matters.

First result will appear on December 2, when the first of these concerts is broadcast over Station WQQW. The station is providing the broadcasts without charge to orchestra or schools.

Washington business firms helping to finance the programs include the Hecht Co., People's Drug Stores, Campbell Music Co., Sears Roebuck & Co., Lee D. Butler, Inc., and an anonymous friend of the orchestra.

Delegates Entertained

Norris Dodd, director general of the Food and Agricultural Organization, entertained at a cocktail party on Monday in the Shoreham Hotel's Terrace room, in honor of the delegates to the FAO Conference and the new conference chairman, Cuban Ambassador Oscar Gans.

Greeting guests with Mr. Dodd were his daughter, Mrs. Mary Dodd Lewis, Sir Herbert Broadley, Deputy Director of FAO and Lady Broadley.

Brazilian General Guest

Brig. Gen. Eudoro Barcellos, director of engineering of the Brazilian army, was honored yesterday at a luncheon given by Col. John G. Ladd, commanding officer of the Army Map Service, and later at a reception given by Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick at the Officers' Club at Fort McNair.

A dinner was given at the Swiss Legation last evening by the Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

The White Window

The excitement at 14th and F streets? It's being caused by the breath-taking adaptation of Dior's "Venus" in our corner window, and the bouffant beauties in our other windows.

Only a few short weeks ago, we presented the French original of "Venus." Jacques Fath's "Tabac Blonde" was the desire of every woman who saw it.

Faithful adaptations of our French imports, plus other French and American designs, are now ready for the Washington Winter Season in our world-renowned Third Floor Couturier Salons.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Writer Is Baffled by Woman Co-Worker Who Makes Disparaging Remarks About Her Taste in Apparel, Then Turns Up in Similar Adornment; How Cope?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In the office where I work there are a number of girls and I had thought one in particular was my friend. I always lunched with her, during which time she would address me by first name.

However, in returning to the office, as we mounted the stairs, she would remain in back of me and make critical remarks about my apparel, as for instance, "Why Miss Blank, your seams are crooked," or "You have a run in your stocking," or "The rain has spotted your stockings," etc.,—always when others were around. I did away with this criticism by waiting for her to take the stairs ahead of me.

Once I bought a light blue suit and after remarking it, this girl Kate told me it was a poor buy because that shade of blue faded so badly. After I discarded the suit, she bought one the same color. Later I wore a dark blue tailored coat with a green hat, and she lost no time telling me how she disliked that combination of colors, but it wasn't long before she was wearing those colors together.

Critic Is Throaty Since Reading Book

NOT LONG AGO I purchased an umbrella covered in small-checked silk. This, too, came in for Kate's criticism. She said it was all right if you like checks, but as for her, she did not; checks made her dizzy. Now she has just bought a checkered suit, and the design is exactly the same as the umbrella cover.

Every time I make a statement I am rudely corrected by her, so I decided it was best to remain silent and calm at all costs. Recently she read Dale Carnegie's book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," and now the strain of association is much worse. She constantly criticizes others, too, remarking to me how cheaply they dress, etc., and then I find her talking and laughing with them.

Frankly I don't know how to cope with such a person. Does she know what it is to be a friend? Have you any helpful suggestions?

B. F.

Writer Is Leading Too Restricted Life

DEAR B. F.: Kate is a problem to you at the office in proportion as you are a problem to yourself socially, due to timidity and insufficient outlets for self-expression.

If you were a happily maturing person on the score of expanding social interests and constructive adjustments to people, Kate's peculiarities wouldn't haunt you to the point of your feeling over powered by them. Figuratively speaking, you would leave her in the office after business hours, and you would observe her foibles with mild detachment.

You would casually note that she is an anxious, envious, striving person, unconsciously animated by jealous hostility towards her own sex particularly, a competitive bias that is manifest in her practice of disparaging those things about other girls which she later imitates, and of courting forms of friendship with the individuals she most criticizes.

Both Should Face Towards Maturity

YOU WOULD sense, as she picked people to pieces, that fault-finding is habitual to her thinking, and I am sure you would see that she is either rigidly defensive against, or extremely allergic to criticism of herself.

I should say Kate's trouble is that she missed beneficent love in formative years and misses it still, hence has no satisfying real psychological relatedness to her fellow beings, via substantial interchange of cordial devotion or honest good will. Lacking this right start towards emotional growth and positive socialization, she is "negatively conditioned" to all aspects of existence, hence blocked from relating herself zestfully to creative work or expressive hobbies, or indeed any pursuits that might free her from carping self-centeredness.

How cope with a person like Kate? The solution won't be found in terms of studied reactions, but rather in recognizing that it were childish to regard her assertive traits as proof of authority. So, take yourself in hand, to discover and correct those areas of immaturity in your feelings which cause you to defer unduly to others' vociferated opinions. And for gracious insight into the significance of Kate's behavior and yours, read Dr. H. A. Overstreet's new book, "The Mature Mind," a delightful opus published by W. W. Norton & Co.

Use Exercise, Not Straps

You'll Look a Decade Younger If You Keep the Chin Line Firm

By Ida Jean Kain

IT IS INTERESTING to note that in Vienna, police ruled that actresses signing official papers might lie about their age up to 10 years, without risking punishment for false registration.

Fair enough . . . most actresses appear a good 10 years younger than their birthdate. Not than they have a longer hold on youth than the rest of us, but an actress always carries her head correctly. That's part of her stock in trade—perfect posture and beautiful head carriage. And make no mistake, that is one secret of holding the chinline.

No use quibbling, after 35 the chin is the line of least resistance to age, unless we employ strong measures. And the best hedge against chin troubles is good head carriage for the reason that it's constant, and it helps keep the muscles firmly on the job.

Keep It on the Level

TEST IT. Sit sidewards to a mirror, push up with the top of the head and straighten the line at the back of the neck. Now your head is squarely on your shoulders, with the chin level. The trick is to habitually keep it that way . . . aim to keep that line at the back of the neck almost straight.

One woman wrote to ask if wearing a chin strap while working would help save her chin. How could it? That would weaken the muscles, and it's strong muscles that make a young throatline. I never think of a chin strap without recalling the cartoon of the plump matron, complete with chin strap, peering into the refrigerator. "Better tie that strap over your mouth," her husband is advising.

Extra calories do sneak up under the chin, but more so when the chin is allowed to droop as it is when your head is not held correctly. Muscle tone is the whole secret, according to a man who deals in double chins. "Keep tone in the bracing muscles, and you can fool the public by more than 10 years," he promises. He advises a little daily exercise, backed up with good head carriage.

Easy Lifting Exercise

HERE IS a very easy exercise that any woman can take, and it does keep tone in the throat muscles. Lie on back on bed, without a pillow. Lift head up just an inch or two—lift, but do not tip chin down. To lift without tipping the chin down, raise the top of the shoulders very slightly. Hold. Lower. Repeat three times only, and do this night and morning.

What about creams and oils as beauty measures? Fine, as lubricants. Wrinkles form when the skin is not pliable enough, so cream helps. But cream cannot tone the muscles; only exercise can do that.

A minute or two of exercise, however, can't counteract the damaging effects of letting your head droop forward, so beautiful head carriage is the real secret . . . and actresses practice it.

Modern Touch For Jelly Roll

FROZEN boysenberries add a modern twist to the old-fashioned jelly roll. Why not try one soon—it can be whipped up in a hurry for family or company.

FILLING

4 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon lemon juice
few grains of salt

Defrost boysenberries, save enough for garnish. Moisten cornstarch with water, stir into defrosted berries, sugar, and salt. Cook slowly over low heat until liquid is clear. Add butter, and lemon juice. Cool.

OLD-FASHIONED JELLY ROLL

¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs, room temperature
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Sift flour; measure. Combine baking powder, salt, and eggs. Beat with a rotary or electric beater, adding sugar gradually, until mixture becomes thick and lemon-colored. Fold in flour and lemon juice. Turn into a 15x10 inch pan that has been lined with waxed paper, then greased. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 13 minutes. Quickly cut off crisp edges of cake and remove paper. Turn cake out onto a cloth or towel that has been dusted with powdered sugar. Roll cake, rolling cloth up in cake. Cool for about 10 minutes. Unroll, spread with thickened boysenberries and roll again. Wrap in cloth and place on cake rack to finish cooling.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

It seems to be rather common for parents to be more worried about doing the best job possible in bringing up their first child than they are about his younger brothers and sisters. Nothing could be more natural. They have had little experience with babies. They worry more about whether things are going right. And over and over again one finds that they expect more from the first child.

As subsequent offspring arrive, both mother and father tend to relax. They probably don't try to train the younger children quite so early. They "take it easy" in a lot of ways. And all this makes for greater calmness and relation in the child.

Unfortunately, it's common for parents to continue to follow the pattern of expectation they have developed with the older child just as it was built up. So he finds that he is expected to be on his own much more. Baby brother can play with things that are forbidden his older brother. He hears "He's only a baby" again and again. Yet, when he was the baby's age, such things were forbidden him. He was expected to be more grown up.

Oldest children may feel that such things are unfair. Yet parents find it hard to see that they treat him differently than they do the younger kids. It's something that bears looking into in many families. How about yours?

Advice on Removing Black Stains From Rust-Colored Corduroy Skirt

Can you tell me what, if anything, will remove black stains—possibly made by wet crepe paper—from a corduroy skirt? The skirt is rust colored, brand new, and was worn by my daughter to a football game in the rain.

As the stains are on the back of the skirt I am not sure whether they were caused by newspaper print from papers on which she sat, or from crepe streamers of the school colors, orange and black, which the "gang" wore. But, as the streamers were very bedraggled and faded I am inclined to think the stains are from the paper dye.

Local cleaners say that they cannot guarantee stain removal without discloration of the skirt, or even complete removal. As I have had unsuccessful experience in washing corduroy, even following instructions, I hesitate to wash the skirt. Do you think it could be successfully dyed any color but black? What do you advise? M. M. L.

Since the dye that stained the skirt is apparently water-soluble, any method which might remove it will involve immersing in water and eventual washing. However, because the skirt is unusable in its present condition, washing would seem a worthwhile risk.

Start by soaking the skirt for several hours in cool, clear water. If the dye is readily drawn out at the beginning of the soaking period, change the water frequently to avoid spreading the stain. After soaking, wash the stain, using liquid shampoo soap. This soap does not set stain as some soaps do. Pour the soap directly on the wet stain and rub between the hands. Continue as long as improvement is seen. When no more dye is removed this way, rinse twice and dry the skirt, shaking it vigorously several times during drying to fluff the nap and soften.

If the stain is not completely removed when the skirt is dry, dampen just the stained area and rub sodium perborate into it. Sodium perborate is a mild bleach which probably will not affect the skirt color but to be sure, test it first on an inside seam. In time it may bleach the stain. Give it plenty of time to act, rubbing occasionally between the hands to work it into the fibers. Repeat as long as you see improvement.

If these treatments do not remove the stain, dyeing black seems to be the only remaining solution.

I have a number of ostrich plumes which I would like to use on hats in the millinery course I am taking. They need to be curled or spruced up in some way. Where may I find instructions for tinting, cleaning, splitting, and curling these plumes? If the process calls for skilled know-how, is there some place I could take or send them to be reconditioned? W. L. H.

"Complete Book of Modern Crafts" by H. Atwood Reynolds (The World Publishing Co., Cleveland and New York) contains a section on rejuvenating and dyeing feathers. Here is the method this author suggests: First clean and soften the feathers by washing in castile soap. The quill can be softened by soaking in hot water for a half hour. Then use a silk dye in the proportion of one package of dye to 2 or 3 gallons of water (the amount of water you use is determined by the depth of color you wish the feathers to be). Add one cup of strong vinegar to the dye solution.

For light tints, use a cold dye bath; for dark shades use the dye bath luke warm. Color the butt end of the feather first and then immerse the entire feather. When the feather is the wanted color, rinse in warm water and pat some of the moisture away with a soft cloth. Fluff the feather by sprinkling a large tablespoon of powdered starch over it and then gently rubbing it in. Shake starch out.

The feathers can be curled by holding in a stream of steam from a tea kettle.

I'm sorry, I know of no place in the city which reconditions feathers. If our readers know of such a place, I would be glad to have the information.

We have had new oak splint bottoms put in some chairs. What is best to put on the seats to preserve them—a spar varnish or shellac? I. D. N.

Spar varnish gives a tough finish which is highly resistant to moisture and weather. If the chairs are to be used out of doors you should use a spar varnish finish. For ordinary indoor use, several coats of shellac would be a very satisfactory finish. Or, you could use an indoor varnish which dries with no gloss—dull drying, it is called.

Attention Mrs. C. M. of Washington and Mrs. F. L. H. of Alexandria: There is a shop in Alexandria which sells antiques on consignment. I suggest you call Alexandria 0649.

I wish to paint the upper half of the bathroom. Should I use a rose wall and ceiling or rose wall and leave the ceiling cream or perhaps rose wall and blue ceiling, or some other combination, possibly painting the door also.

The floor is an uninteresting speckled tile with black and white mat on it. Lower half of wall is white tile trimmed with black and white fixtures. The one high window is curtained with two lightweight bathtowels which are white background with rose flowers predominating and blue bows. There is a blue wastebasket and blue towels which add the only other touch of color. The painted wall is stippled so painting would be easier than removing the stippling and papering with a design, and, of course, the design already used seems to call for a solid background. E. C. B.

I suggest you use a rose tint for the walls and ceilings which exactly matches the rose color in your curtains or is a little lighter. Or, you could use a rose which exactly matches the curtains on the side wall and a lighter rose for the ceiling.

The woodwork should be pure white or it could be painted to match your walls. To get a matching paint, take a sample to one of the stories which has a color bar for mixing paints to order. One store which offers this service is located on 13th st. and can be reached by calling District 1130.

Can you help me find a source through which I can purchase new wool materials for braiding rugs? I prefer that it be sold by the pound and in the piece (not stripped). Or, if stripped, that the strips be two inches wide at least. A.M.

By writing direct to factories where blankets are made it is sometimes possible to buy ends and odd lots of wool pieces by the pound for making rugs. The Bloomfield Woolen Co., Dept. ML7, Bloomfield, Indiana, will sell wool blanket pieces in 10 bright colors suitable for rugs. This wool is in the piece—to cut it in strips they charge 10 cents extra per pound. They will provide free samples upon request.

Maryland Education Standards Win Praise

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

MARYLAND, and especially Montgomery County, should hold its head high for its educational accomplishments, Miss Mary A. Adams said yesterday.

Miss Adams, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary education in Baltimore, was the guest speaker at an all-day meeting of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs in Kensington.

The public interest in education has resulted in an improved teachers' salary scale in Baltimore and in Montgomery County. Miss Adams pointed out the high quality of the curriculum program and education standards in Montgomery schools.

Fundamentals Retained

SO MUCH PROGRESS has been made in the past quarter of a century in education, Miss Adams said, that we are at the threshold of the Golden Age. Yet the basic fundamental training is not being left behind, she added.

On the subject of extending the scope of public education to include nursery schools and the junior colleges, Miss Adams suggested that each community would have to settle that problem for itself.

Hopes Pinned on U. S.

IN JAPAN, INDIA, PAKISTAN and other countries people pin their hopes on the United States to help them obtain a higher standard of living. So discovered Miss Doris Fleeson, syndicated columnist, and Mrs. May Craig, Washington correspondent for a group of Maine newspapers, on a recent around-the-world trip.

Speaking at the Women's National Press Club's luncheon yesterday, they said that wherever they went, they found people who believed that the United States can help the world develop a better standard of living through sharing technical know-how and agricultural skills.

While in Japan both Mrs. Craig and Miss Fleeson lunched with Gen. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur. Miss Fleeson recommends eating a ham sandwich before dining with the Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces. Although there is plenty of excellent food, she says that the general eats practically nothing at the table, so that guests "feel a little silly eating" while the general discourses on peace and democratization of the Japanese.

Cites Conflicting View

MISS FLEESON observed that General MacArthur believes that the Japanese already have been democratized. But she heard a conflicting view expressed by Rear Admiral Benton Weaver Decker, Commander of the United States Naval Base at Yokosuka. He told the columnist that the United States would need to stay in Japan 50 years to complete the democratization.

"In Japan as well as Germany the real tests of occupation will come when the countries must support themselves," she concluded.

Nurses Install President

MISS MARIE E. WALLACE was installed president of the Graduate Nurses' Association at a banquet Monday at the Statler Hotel.

The banquet concluded the annual joint convention of the association and the League of Nursing Education which opened here November 7.

Miss Wallace, chief of Nursing Operations of the Federal Employes Health Division of the United States Public Health Service, had earlier been reelected to a two-year term.

Another highlight of the banquet was presentation of the Linda Richards Achievement Award to Miss Elizabeth Ann Campbell, Assistant Nursing Arts Instructor at Garfield Memorial Hospital.

The award is presented annually by the American Nurses' Association to an outstanding professional nurse in each State for her "achievement, scholarship, appearance, personality, leadership, aptitude for nursing and devotion to duty."

Miss Lillian Adams, director of nursing service of the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross, was installed first vice president of the GNA, and Miss Gladys Phipps, director of Nursing Service of the National Homeopathic Hospital, treasurer.

New members of the board of directors include Miss Charlotte Hasselbusch, educational director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, and Miss Kathryn Witmer, director of nursing at Children's Hospital.

Donor Lunch Draws Crowd

MORE THAN 250 women turned out yesterday to the donor luncheon given by the Medical Unit, City of Hope Auxiliary, at the Shoreham Hotel.

Harold Greenspan, regional director for the organization, outlined the services offered by the City of Hope Hospital. Mrs. Harry Goldman, president, presided.

Other features of the program included musical numbers by Jerry Strong and an invocation pronounced by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld.

ON TODAY'S CALENDAR . . .

Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, judge of the District Court, and Mrs. Una Rita Morris, Assistant Corporation Counsel assigned to Juvenile Court, will be honor guests at the Women's Bar Association luncheon, Raleigh Hotel, at noon . . . Hugh Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School, will speak on "The Child Guidance Clinic" at a luncheon meeting of the Soroptimist Club of Washington, Willard Hotel.

It's a "natural"—as they say—that the perfect gift of this mid-twentieth century Christmas should be one of the twentieth century's most outstanding achievements—the nylon blouse.

Pretty blouses have always been popular presents and the magic properties of nylon make them even more so. It's wonderful to realize that those fine dainty sheers with ruffles and laces and embroideries no longer entail hours of laboring with a hot iron!

Alabama Court to Hear Taylor Appeal Tuesday

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 22 (AP).—A hearing for Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), convicted of disorderly conduct in Birmingham during the 1948 election campaign, has been set for next Tuesday before the Alabama Court of Appeals.

Taylor, a candidate for Vice President on the Progressive ticket, was arrested in May, 1948, while trying to enter a door reserved for Negroes at a meeting of the Southern Negro Youth Congress.

He was convicted in Birmingham police court, fined $50 and given a 180-day suspended jail sentence. Taylor then appealed to Circuit Court and drew a $50 fine and a 180-day sentence. He took the case then to the Court of Appeals.

Rev. Frank Burress Elected D. C. Baptist Convention Head

The Rev. Frank B. Burress, pastor of Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, yesterday was named president of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention.

Mr. Burress

Mr. Burress succeeds the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, who held the post two years.

Other officers are Herbert W. Ludwig of Petworth church, vice president; E. H. Pendell, Avondale church, secretary; Everett Haycraft of Silver Spring church, assistant secretary, all reelected, and George B. Fraser of Chevy Chase church, treasurer.

At the morning meeting, a total budget for 1949-1950 of $178,500 was adopted. Of the amount, $89,950 will be used for work in the District of Columbia and $64,550 divided between the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions. The remainder will be used for debt reduction.

During the past year, the convention had 1323 baptisms, the greatest number in its 72-year history, Mr. Burress reported.

The total of 3136 admissions to the church, he said, was also the greatest in the history of the D. C. convention. Mr. Burress reported there are now 28,882 members in the 34 churches in the convention.

A two-week city-wide simultaneous evangelistic effort in the fall resulted in a net gain of 602 persons to 27 churches, he said.

Delegates approved a recommendation calling for expenditure of $250,000 for "church planning and planting" in the next 10 years.

Another resolution approved called for strengthening of Sunday schools

Technical Error Curb Is Sought

Over Four Years

Natural Gas Saving Put at $1,250,000

The Washington Gas Light Co. would save $1,250,000 in four years if an application by Commonwealth Natural Gas Corp. to serve Virginia cities with natural gas is approved, a witness at a Federal Power Commission hearing said yesterday.

This is part of a saving of three million dollars in 1950-53 for present customers of Atlantic Seaboard Corp., which R. J. Ryder, Charleston, W. Va., said would be effected if the service is authorized.

Ryder, vice president of Atlantic Seaboard Transmission Corp., gave the testimony under cross-examination by counsel for the Washington Gas Light Co., one of Atlantic Seaboard's customers.

The savings, Ryder said, would be made possible through bigger volume sales by Seaboard at virtually no added cost for facilities.

Virginia Gas Tranmission Corp., the Virginia portion of Atlantic Seaboard, has agreed to supply Commonwealth if Commonwealth is authorized to serve the Virginia cities of Richmond, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Petersburg, Hopewell and Suffolk. Commonwealth is opposed by Piedmont Natural Gas Corp., which wants to serve North and South Carolina cities in addition to Virginia markets.

Ryder said Washington would get gas of lower heating value if Commonwealth is supplied by Virginia gas.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 22 (AP).—As effects of a technical error which invalidated a Maryland school loan law snowballed today, Attorney General Hall Hammond sought a means to prevent the same thing from happening again.

The Court of Appeals threw out the law last week. Through a clerical error, there was no record in the legislative journal of its ever passing.

The bill, which was signed by the Governor, would have set up a 50-million-dollar "credit pool" from which the counties could have borrowed to finance new school construction.

Suggests Two Records

Hammond said that something must be done to make sure the same mistake is not made again. He suggested that two official records be kept—one by the regular journal clerks and another by independent clerks as a check.

Meanwhile, because of the Court of Appeals decisions:

1. The state has decided to postpone issuance of bonds to provide direct grants to counties for school construction.

2. A check through the legislative records showed that another apparent clerical error in the State Senate may temporarily cost Maryland liquor dealers their sales to Army and Navy posts.

3. An official of the State Department of education said county school superintendents believe the school construction program will be slowed down.

Special Session Asked

4. The all-Republican legislative delegation from Montgomery County asked Governor Lane to call a special session of the General Assembly to repass the school "credit pool" bill.

The Governor has indicated he does not think it will be necessary to hold a special session.

The next regular session of the Legislature will be held in February. The school loan bill could not be passed until near the end of the 30-day session.

Prince Georges to Await Lane Action on School Plan

Prince Georges County commissioners decided yesterday to mark time on their school program until December 6 in hope Governor Lane will have worked out a solution of the school bond dilemma by that time.

Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart and Director of School Planning Thomas S. Gwynn asked the commissioners to take advantage of the 10-million-dollar bond issue authorized by the Legislature to provide for schools, now held up by the Maryland Court of Appeals decision that the State school loan bond issue act is invalid because of a clerical error in the recording of the bill in the Senate.

Cite December 7 Deadline

The school officials pointed out that December 7 is the deadline for accepting or rejecting the bid on the Suitland High School construction proposed by the Joseph F. Nebel Co. of Washington. They said the bid of $1,318,000 is considerably lower then they had anticipated by about $600,000 and there is no assurance the bid will be continued at that low figure after the deadline.

Use of approximately $300,000 of the money saved on this project for construction of a Brandywine elementary 10-classroom building and renovation of the four rooms now in use there was urged. The commissioners approved the addition of the Brandywine school to the program.

Balance for Cafeteria

The school officials also suggested the balance saved be used to put in a cafeteria at Suitland High but the commissioners said they did not wish to discriminate but would adhere to their policy of building only classrooms until they find whether additional funds will make possible cafeterias in all of the new school buildings.

The commissioners said they felt that it is likely Governor Lane will work out a method of proceeding with the school financing program and voted to wait until December 6 before deciding on the sale of the 10 million dollars in county bonds.

The commissioners refused to reopen the zoning action which last week granted apartment house and commercial zoning for a 13-acre tract at Landover Hills. Such action was requested by Mrs. Dorothy Schwartz, acting as a town official.

Woman Suing Church Files $25,000 Claim

Mrs. Sam Weinberg, 1530 16th st. nw., sued for $25,000 for injuries she said she suffered when she fell down while leaving a bingo game at the Holy Comforter School.

Mrs. Weinberg said the accident occurred last May 28, and that the fall aggravated a pre-existing arthritis of the spine, causing her severe pain when she does her housework. She must wear a back brace, the suit contends.

She said she purchased a ticket and went to the school, 15th and East Capitol sts., to play bingo. She left at 10:30 p. m., and fell down steps near the door, she said.

Her husband asks $5000 damages additional for expenses and loss of his wife's services. The Weinbergs' attorney is Samuel Bogoran.

Jap Friendship Held Cemented By U. S. Program

Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, USA (ret.), wartime commander of the Eighth Army in the South Pacific, described yesterday how the United States' "common sense" reconstruction program had earned the friendship of the Japanese since the war's end.

Speaking to officer students at the Engineer School at Fort Belvoir, General Eichelberger said the job was achieved in the face of a problem of peacetime conversion of a country whose every resource had been geared for war for more than a decade.

As an illustration of the occupation's achievement, General Eichelberger cited figures showing how Japan's coal output had been raised from 40,000 tons per month at the war's end to 50 million tons per year at present.

Trumans at Opening Of 71-Seat Theater

President and Mrs. Truman attended the opening last night of a 71-seat theater of the Motion Picture Association of America, at I and 16th sts. nw.

Eric Johnston, president of the association, was host to the Trumans, members of the Cabinet and heads of motion picture companies at an advance showing of "Samson and Delilah."

The theater, adjoining the association's headquarters, will be used for special previews of motion pictures to be attended by Washington officials and other dignitaries.

Carpenter Is Held

John S. Lacovaro, 59, a carpenter, of 208 A st. nw., was held yesterday for grand jury action on a charge that he took indecent liberties with a 7-year-old girl in her home where he was visiting last Friday. Bond was set at $4000 by Judge Armond W. Scott of Municipal Court.

Capital Transit Hits Pro-Oriole Bus Ruling

Capital Transit Co. yesterday said its bus service in the Silver Spring area "would be endangered" if the ICC lets Oriole Motor Coach Lines, Inc., pick up and discharge passengers within the area.

The transit company filed exceptions to a recommendation made by a joint District-Maryland board designated by ICC. The board had recommended ICC approval of Oriole's request for permission to pick up and discharge passengers on routes between the District line and Forest Glen rd. and between the junction of U. S. 29 and Md. 97 in Silver Spring and Four Corners be granted.

In its exceptions, filed by Attorneys F. G. Awalt and Daryal A. Mayse, Capital Transit contended the joint board members are without jurisdiction to hear Oriole's report.

The company also contended that the board erred in finding that public convenience and necessity would be served by granting Oriole's application. It said the board was wrong in failing to state its reasons for recommending the grant, and in failing to find that the service Oriole offered duplicates service now performed by Capital Transit.

The petition warned that "continuance of any service by Capital Transit in the entire Silver Spring area, including routes in areas not proposed to be served by Oriole, would be endangered because the service rendered in such other areas is dependent upon the service rendered on Georgia ave. and Colesville rd.

Capital Transit asked for a hearing on its exceptions and also asked the ICC to reverse the recommended ruling.

T. A. O'Donnell Estate Placed At $266,107

Thomas A. ODonnell, Washington restauranteur who died September 24, left an estate of $266,107, a probate petition filed yesterday indicated.

Six pieces of real property were evaluated at a total of $140,800, and personal property—mostly in stocks and bonds and including a large interest in O'Donnell's Grill—was placed at $113,307. Unsecured debts amounted to $12,000.

The bulk of the estate is to be divided in three equal shares to go to his wife, Mrs. Mildred O'Donnell; their three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Freund, Pelham, N. Y., Mrs. Janice Edelblut, 4801 Chevy Chase dr., Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Eileen Wolchick, 3319 Old Dominion blvd., Alexandria, and Miss Marie Ethridge, Mayflower Hotel secretary, of 1 Scott Circle nw.

Executors are Charles E. Ford and Dr. Clayton B. Ethridge, the restauranteur's physician and brother of Miss Ethridge.

A Sweet-Smelling Plan Turns Sour In Municipal Court

Julius C. Jackson, 19, might have been the sweetest-smelling man in town—if he hadn't been caught.

Jackson, who resides at 1957 H st. nw., was convicted yesterday in Municipal Court of shoplifting 23 vials of perfume valued at $40 from the Hecht Co. His case was referred to the probation office before sentence.

In another department store case, Miss Victorine Bond, 19, of 4211 Foote pl. ne., was found guilty of false pretense in using other persons' charge accounts in getting a coat and hat valued at $31.94. Her case was also referred to the probation office. Police testified she jotted down the identification and charge account numbers of other customers and used them as her own.

Submits Low Bid

National Engineering Co. yesterday offered the lowest—$74,283—of five bids on a contract to construct a four-apartment building to house members of the medical staff at the District's tuberculosis sanitorium at Glenn Dale, Md.

Traffic Chief Miller Shifted To Night Work

Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller, chief of the traffic division, has been assigned temporarily as night supervising inspector from 4 p.m. to midnight. Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett announced yesterday.

Miller

Capt. Loraine T. Johnson, No. 2 man in the traffic division, will be acting traffic inspector during the command shift, which is not expected to last more than eight days.

A shortage of police inspectors available for the night supervising assignment, Barrett explained, is the reason for placing Miller on the "owl trick."

Inspector Lloyd Kelly, assistant superintendent and regularly assigned night man, is on sick leave and three other inspectors are on annual leave. They are Clarence Talley, chief of uniformed forces, William J. Cunningham and Oscar J. Letterman, both of whom have recently alternated as night supervisors.

Lane Assailed, Urged to Name Hospital Head

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—A Republican today criticized Governor Lane for "indecision" in dealing with Maryland's mental hospitals and the Baltimore County Grand Jury urged him to name a mental hygiene commissioner immediately.

Stanley Scherr, young Republican National Committeeman for Maryland, made his statement in connection with the resignation yesterday of Dr. Robert B. May as head of the Eastern Shore State Hospital.

Dr. May said he was quitting because of insecurity he said resulted from the delay in naming a mental hygiene commissioner.

Scherr charged "it was simply another of Governor Lane's characteristic acts of indecision which caused Dr. May to resign.

"As long as this sort of thing continues, all our good men are going to drift away to other States . . ."

Montgomery Jury Returns 54 Indictments

The Montgomery County grand jury yesterday returned 54 indictments out of 58 cases presented for consideration, including one against a 58-year-old Travilah (Md.) farmer accused of incest with his 16-year-old daughter.

The indicted farmer, Arthur L. Lowe, former Washington building contractor, was originally charged with assault in a warrant sworn to by one of his three sons.

Also included among the 22 indicted persons were three servicemen charged with the rape of a 28-year-old Bethesda governess last September 11. They are: Marine Pfc. Robert A. Allen, 21, and Charles E. Boner, 24, a sailor, both then patients at Bethesda Naval Hospital, and Marine Pfc. Jesse Wakefield, 24, stationed at the Naval Communications Center, 3801 Nebraska ave. nw.

A second rape indictment was returned against Howard Martin, 18, Tobeytown, Md., accused of attacking a neighbor, September 1.

The jury ignored a manslaughter charge against Mrs. Irene Nancy Douglass, 38-year-old Washington Grove mother, in the death of her new-born infant, June 15. Police contended in the lower court hearing that she smothered the infant and had it buried under the family house. She maintained the child was stillborn.

The county jail at Rockville was described in the jury's report as "in very good condition" and its 32 inmates were said to be "well taken care of."

By Georganne Williamson

THANKSGIVING DAY dinners hereabouts range from $1.85 in Ceres, to $4.50 for everything the Carlton Hotel chefs can dream up. The latter includes, among numerous courses, a pumpkin soup named Creme Prudence, a special dessert — Coupe aux Marrons — which is a concoction of vanilla ice cream and chestnuts. Other desserts at the Carlton are hot mince or pumpkin pie, plum pudding with hard sauce, or eggnog parfait. Among the entrees, roast suckling pig with apple dressing, Virginia ham in champagne sauce, and breast of guinea hen.

Normandy Farm, Olney Inn and Brook Farm will reward patrons with a real Thanksgiving atmosphere. Two Supreme Court justices and a Senator are among those who protected their share of the turkey at Brook Farm (at $2.75) with early reservations.

Normandy Farm ($4 per) offers a special Normandy cream soup; their Bacardi parfait is another exclusive, and the popovers at both Normandy Farm and Watergate Inn are superb.

Watergate Inn, for $3.75, has besides the turkey and roast beef, ham specially prepared the Lancaster Dutch way—also a Pennsylvania Dutch apple cheese pie.

Michel's, for $2.25, brings out the duckling and Virginia ham, for $2.50 turkey, $2.60 roast beef. Ciro's Italian Village at $2.50 will have fresh ham instead of baked, roast beef and turkey. After the appetizer and soup they'll bring in some spaghetti or ravioli, but otherwise it's a dinner the Pilgrims might have had.

Olmsted's, at $3, serves an oyster cocktail, a special Thanksgiving soup of undisclosed ingredients, turkey with a choice of oyster or chestnut stuffing, their famous rum buns, etc.

Other places and prices: Ted Lewis and Roger Smith, $2.50; Raleigh, Shoreham and Willard, $2.75.

King George on Hunt, Appears Recovered

Waldenberg, England, Nov. 22 (AP).—King George went gunning today, looking fit as a fiddle.

He moved from one shoot to another in a land rover—a British vehicle similar to a jeep—"but he walked quite a bit," an observer reported.

After eight hours in the fields, the King showed no signs of fatigue. It is believed he is fully recovered from a circulatory ailment in his legs which forced a nerve operation several months ago.

ACTH Helps In Asthma, Doctors Find

"Unequivocal benefit" in relief from heretofore incurable asthma through use of ACTH, rare pituitary extract, is reported by a research team at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

The report is contained in the issue of the "Bulletin of the Johns Hopkins Hospital" distributed yesterday.

The hormone extract, the research team reported, eliminated all asthmatic symptoms of five patients within one to eight days. For some, asthmatic symptoms recurred after the treatment was stopped—but to a degree far less severe than suffered over the years in their recurrent bouts.

One of the five patients, the report noted, was symptom-free from the wracking respiratory disease a full month after discontinuance of ACTH injections, or up to the writing of the report.

All five patients had suffered asthma without noteworthy relief with other treatments for from five to 23 years.

ACTH, the adrenocorticotrophic hormone which is painstakingly processed in minute quantities from the pea-size pituitary glands of pigs, was first reported to the medical world as a miracle treatment for rheumatoid arthritis last April. Since then, the scarce supply has been doled out by its processors, Armour and Co., for medical research only.

The doctors who collaborated on the Hopkins' asthma study and report emphasized last night that there is no present hope for treating long-suffering asthma patients with ACTH. At present, they said, there isn't even enough of the product for vital research.

Since the report's writing, the research men said, two other asthmatic patients have been treated, with similar marked improvement, and patients who suffered recurrence of asthmatic symptoms were given new courses of treatment with larger doses of ACTH. Second treatments, they said, apparently ended all symptoms, but far too little time has since elapsed to make any cure claims.

Collaborating in the study are Drs. John E. Bordley, Richard A. Carey, A. McGehee Harvey, John E. Howard, Albert A. Kattus, Elliot V. Newman and Walter L. Winkenwerder, from the departments of medicine and otolaryngology.

Eloping Couple Freed, Returns To D. C. Today

Orangeburg, S. C., Nov. 22 (Spl.). A runaway Washington area couple—he's all of 18, she's 17—is due to return to their homes Wednesday after a brush with police here.

The youngsters, Barbara Jean Betts, 17, of Fairland, Md., and Herbert Burnside Lowry, jr., 18, of 1934 Eskridge ter. nw. Washington, were taken into custody yesterday.

Police Chief T. E. Salley said they ran away to get married, but once here ran up against South Carolina's 24-hour waiting period.

They were released by police in the custody of their parents.

Commissioners Ban River Boats Used for Housing

Floating rooming houses, which flourished here during the wartime housing shortage, were officially banned yesterday by the District Commissioners.

In an amendment to police regulations, the Commissioners ruled that houseboats and other river craft may no longer be used to house more than one family.

Assistant Engineer Commissioner Thomas J. Hayes, 3d, said he knew of only one craft now renting rooms, the Tech, at 9:50 Maine ave. sw., which has about 10 boarders. During the war, however, 15 or 20 boats were used for this purpose, he said.

Bishops Term 20% of Films Objectionable

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Nearly one in every five movies put out by Hollywood was found "morally objectionable," the chairman of the Catholic Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures said today.

But Hollywood's record was far better than that of foreign films, nearly half of which were found "objectionable."

The Most Rev. William A. Scully, coadjutor bishop of the Albany Catholic diocese, said his committee, working through the Legion of Decency, reviewed 467 feature-length films during the year..

About 19 percent of Hollywood movies and 47 percent of the foreign films were found "morally objectionable in whole or part."

He refused to name either the good films or the bad ones.

Of 109 films deemed "offensive," 96 came under the committee's "B" listing as "morally objectionable in part or all" and 13 were "C" or condemned. Of the "B" films, 46 were classed as "major" productions.

Bishop Scully said "not only numerically but also in kind and amount of offensiveness, we have noted an increase in this year's productions. There is a large number of motion pictures which are close to the border line between B and C."

He said "in too many stories, characters who are evil are presented in an attractive and sympathetic way."

Vaughan Painting Of Pumpkin Heads Nets Charity $75

New York, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan's first venture into the world of art brought $75 for charity tonight.

That was the top bid for the famous "pumpkin" painting by President Truman's military aide. It was sold at public auction along with 126 other "paintings by famous amateurs" in a charity program sponsored by the National Urban League.

Mrs. Gardner Cowles, wife of the publisher and chairman of the charity affair, bought Vaughan's painting to "remind him he did a little good in the world.' She added: "He did it seriously to help the Urban League and not foolishly as people said."

The picture shows two leering, lopsided Halloween-like pumpkins, one yellow, one greenish, behind a fence along a road up a hill. At the of the incline is a big question mark surrounded by clouds. On each side of the hill is a big pink blotch. Vaughan never identified the two "pumpkin Heads," but he made no secret of the fact they were members of the Senate committee that questioned him during the "5 percenter" inquiry.

Acheson Begins Vacation

Secretary of State Dean Acheson began a six-day Thanksgiving vacation yesterday—but he will remain at his Sandy Spring, Md., farm ready to deal with any international crises. This meant cancellation of his regular Wednesday press conference.

Cloth Exports Up

The United States exported 4.1 percent more cotton cloth during the first nine months of this year than in the same period last year. The Commerce Department reported yesterday that shipments this year totaled 711,093,000 square yards. Canada received the most—134,450,000 yards.

Winter Days

The winter days are wonderful . . . If we just use them right . . . And look around for happiness . . . Before we say good-night . . . It may be cold and windy and . . . The snow may fill the air . . . But there is always warmth of heart . . . For those who really care . . . And there are sleds and carnivals . . . And stars that light the sky . . . With moments made for memories . . . Forever passing by . . . And there are friends who mean much more . . . Than any time of year . . . Because they are so genuine . . . And constantly sincere . . . And so no matter where we are . . . We all have many ways . . . To gather happy hours and . . . Enjoy the winter days.

Wonder If the Pastel Shades Sell Best?

Mrs. Oliver B. Jones of 9315 Wire ave., Silver Spring, Md., dropped into the Silver Spring Postoffice substation at Woodmoor and asked for some 3-cent stamps.

Very soberly, the man behind the window inquired:

"Pink, green or blue?"

PUN FUN

Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se. writes:

"Have you heard about the difficulties in the match industry? Workers say they won't strike."

PET PEEVE

Marie Manning of 711 N. Wayne St., Arlington, Va., wonders what manner of perversity it is that causes motorists to scare pedestrians half out of their wits.

"They'll wait at the stoplight until your path through the crosswalk brings you directly in front of their car, and then let loose a blast of the horn—just to see you jump. Then they'll sit there and grin, and when the light changes they'll drive off with the air of one who has done something very clever."

SEE YOU AT THE GAME

Mr. Bus Ham, our sports editor, says that unless I write something nice about the Interhigh Football Championship Game he won't let me look at the scores on his baseball ticker come next summer.

Mr. Ham's warning is hardly necessary. Wilson versus McKinley Tech stacks up as a terrific ball game, and at $1.25, $1.75 and $2.26 the prices are certainly reasonable enough.

Besides, all the profits will be used to run the various sports programs in our local high schools next year. All 10 schools share in the proceeds—and they really need the money, because the Board of Education gives them a flat zero for these activities.

The game will be played at Griffith Stadium Friday night, and you can get full details regarding tickets by turning to the sports page right now.

HORSE, DADDY? WHAT'S A HORSE?

The Washington Board of Trade's 60th anniversary celebration begins Monday with a torchlight parade down Pennsylvania ave., starting at the Willard Hotel at 7:15 p. m., and moving from there to Lisner Auditorium.

To give the parade a Gay Nineties flavor appropriate to the days when the Board was just getting started, officials plan to include in the procession any hansom cabs, carriages, or other horse-drawn vehicles that are available.

The trouble is that finding horse-drawn vehicles in this day and age is no easy task. Reg Martine at the Board of Trade (Sterling 3535) is looking for volunteers.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three very playful kittens, 7 weeks old; we're going abroad soon." (Wisconsin 5768.)

"Adorable black and white kitten." (Overlook 4956.)

LET'S FACE IT

Henry F. Unger of 4930 South Dakota ave. ne. has an answer to my recent reminder that the pedestrian has the right of way when both he and a motorist are proceeding on a green light. He says:

"Some pedestrians try to take advantage of this law, and overdo it. They walk as if they had all day.

"One fellow I know has a sure-fire remedy for such slow-moving pedestrians. He calls out:

"'That's all right; if I had a face like yours, I'd want to get run over, too.'

"Fortunately, he's a big fellow, so he's never had any trouble as a result."

KID STUFF

W. H. (Uncle Nung) Moulton of No. 8 Riverside dr., Wilmington, Del., passes along a story about his young nephew, David Stillwell, of Thomasville, Ga.

When Dave was motoring through Florida with his parents, he became curious about some strange objects and names of places. His mother explained that they traced their origin to the Seminole Indians.

Dave kept a sharp lookout for the remainder of the trip, but when his mother asked at the end of the day whether he had enjoyed the sights, the lad piped back:

"Yes, I did, Mommy—but where were the seven old Indians?"

NICE DAY, WASN'T IT?

I'm alarmed each morning
By a clock's shrill ring
Pealing: "Get a move on;
You'll miss everything."

I'm alarmed each evening
That the day is spent.
Slightly dazed, I mutter:
"Wonder where it went?"

McCarran Gives Tips to Franco

By Drew Pearson

Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada, No. 1 enemy of Europe's homeless refugees, has now set himself up as chief volunteer public relations counsel to Europe's No. 1 Fascist dictator.

McCarran

On his latest junket abroad, supposedly to "investigate the current refugee situation," McCarran gave Spain's Franco some shrewdly cynical advice on how to make friends and influence people. In the course of two lengthy interviews, the Senator from Nevada assured his attentive host that "with a little smart handling at this end, Spain can be right back in the front parlor by this time next year."

Unsung Bureaucrats

Thousands of words have been rained upon the reading public about the inequities of bureaucrats. However, there are bureaucrats and bureaucrats, and without some of them the Government couldnt function today.

For instance, a handful of medical bureaucrats are risking death and disease every day to safeguard the health of others. The door outside their bureau at Bethesda, Md., might be covered with quarantine signs, but one sign alone tells the story: "Infectious Diseases."

Inside, doctors and assistants are exploring with microscopes and test tubes, seeking cures for everything—from polio to the common cold. At one time or another, nearly everyone on the staff has been bedridden with some disease; at least three have died during the past decade—victims of their own research.

For such risks, these doctors are paid a modest Government salary, ranging from $4500 to $10,000, though they could earn far more in private practice.

The doctor in charge of polio research, for example, is Dr. Charles Armstrong, who spent eight months in bed and nearly died of tularemia, or rabbit fever, and also came down with dengue fever, parrot fever, Q fever and encephalitis on other assignments. He is now searching desperately for a serum that will prevent polio, is testing other diseases that might be given as an inoculation against polio. He has finally traced the coxaxe virus, which causes a mild disease sometimes mistaken for polio, to suckling mice.

Two other researchers, Dr. Charles Shepard and Dr. Robert Huebner, have made encouraging progress in the fight against Q fever—and, as usual, caught Q fever in the process. They traced this fever to the milk of infected dairy cows, particularly in the Los Angeles area. However, they still haven't located the actual virus that causes the disease.

Dr. Huebner also solved an epidemic of rickettsial pox that cropped up in a New York City apartment district. Huebner's experiments showed the disease was carried by house mice and transmitted by mites, so by cracking down on the mice the epidemic was checked.

Doing field work in Texas, Dr. James Watt traced bacillary dysentery to flies and was able almost to eliminate it by fly control. Now he is continuing his experiments in another area near New Orleans.

Another disease which means almost certain infection to anyone experimenting with it is Bangs disease, or brucellosis. No one has suffered more from this disease than Dr. Alice Evans, who did the pioneer research at the Bethesda laboratory. She has now retired, however, and turned the work over to Dr. Carl Larson.

All research in the laboratory is under the general supervision of Dr. Karl Habel, who has been bedridden with Q fever and encephalitis but is now searching for a more potent rabies vaccine.

WANNA HEAR AN OFF-COLOR STORY?

It seems there was a farmer's daughter who never got a second glance. It wasn't that her ginghams weren't tight enough . . . but they were so-o-o faded they lost their effectiveness. If she had sent all her faded clothes to Arcade-Sunshine for expert dyeing what a wow of an ending this story would have! But we probably couldn't print it.
